Demo School Aid Bill Goes To Congress

Measure Provides $2.3 Billion Over Next Three Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to carry out President Kennedy's $2.3-billion school aid program went to Congress Monday.

"I believe that this legislation will lift our schools to a new level of excellence," Kennedy said of his school aid bill.

The measure would provide $2.298,000,000 over the next three years to help the states build more public elementary and secondary schools. The federal funds also could be used to employ more public school teachers or pay them higher salaries.

The bill is part of the $5.7-billion aid to education program Kennedy outlined in a message to Congress last Monday. The President said the program is designed to set "a new standard of excellence in education" available to "all who are willing and able to pursue it."

Letter Accompanies Bill

In a letter to House Speaker Sam Rayburn, D-Tex., accompanying the school aid bill Monday, Kennedy said: "I am convinced that the national interest requires us to provide every child with an opportunity to develop his talents to their fullest. Inadequacies in our school system handicap this development."

He added his belief the schools would be lifted to new excellence by the legislation.

Accompanying the bill were amendments proposing a cut in the federal aid program for impacted school areas. These would have the effect of a 50 per cent reduction in school aid for communities having large concentrations of federal employees.

The amendments also would make it more difficult for school districts to qualify for this type of aid.

Amendments Bill Planned

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., said he will introduce an administration-backed bill this week to carry out these amendments. Thompson said the reductions would be spread over a period of three years after which the program, now on a year-to-year basis, would be made permanent.

Sharpest reductions would be in areas where parents of school children work for the federal government but do not actually live on military reservations, Thompson said. In these areas the federal government contributes to ward public school costs.

Smaller reductions would be made, he said, in areas where parents of pupils live on government reservations.

The administration's school aid bill proposes appropriations of $666 million in the first fiscal year beginning July 1, 1966 for the year beginning July 1, 1962, and $866 for the third year beginning July 1, 1963.

Trio Fails In Attempt To Kill Castro Aide

HAVANA (UPI) — Three youths Monday shot and killed a Cuban army captain in a daring but unsuccessful attempt to assassinate economic czar Ernesto (Che) Guevara.

The youth who fired the shot was identified as Carlos Manuel Duarte Delgado, 21, of Fomento, Las Villas Province. He killed army capt. Hector Salinas, 29, when Salinas asked him for identification in front of Guevara's home in suburban Mirimar.

Duarte was wounded in the 20-minute gunbattle in front of the villa. All three youths were captured. One eyewitness said at least one of the attackers was a former Guevara army bodyguard.

The ex-bodyguard said they wanted to kill Guevara "because he is a Communist," according to witnesses.

Flood-Stricken South Declared Disaster Area

By The Associated Press

Central and south Alabama braced Monday night for angry torrents of water from flooding rivers rolling relentlessly toward the Gulf of Mexico.

And even as the flood-stricken South tried to pull itself out of the wet morass, a new rainstorm moving in from Texas threatened to drop up to two inches more of rain in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and northwest Florida.

The flood death toll rose to eight—three in Mississippi and five in Georgia.

President Kennedy, expressing deep concern for the flood victims, declared flooded sections of Mississippi and Alabama as major disaster areas.

"I have authorized the use of such federal funds as are necessary for the prosecution of federal assistance to supplement state and local efforts," the President said in response to pleas from Govs. Ross Barnett of Mississippi and John Patterson of Alabama. Fifteen counties in Alabama, six in Mississippi and two in Georgia were declared disaster areas by the U.S. Small Business Administration, making three per cent loans available for restoring homes, businesses, churches or charitable institutions damaged by floods.

Many of the estimated 30,000 flood evacuees returned to their homes Monday to begin the herculean task of sweeping out the muck and debris left by flood waters.

The waters receded slowly at Montgomery and upstream in Alabama, but south of the state capital the worst was yet to come.

The Alabama River reached an unprecedented level of 58.1 feet in Montgomery—21.3 feet over flood stage—before starting to drop. It sent more than 1,500 persons scurrying for dry ground.

Swirling waters of the Coosa River pounded through the edge of the business district at Wetumpka.

The floods posed a major problem for cattlemen in central Alabama, who reported losing hundreds of head and said others were isolated without food. Haylifts were being arranged.

As part of Mississippi's 5,000 evacuees started returning to their flood-ravaged homes, they had to watch out for new perils—poisonous snakes and alligators.

Mundt Retreats As Ike Disavows Statement

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., said his controversial account of a visit with Dwight D. Eisenhower hadn't used exact quotes. Instead, Mundt said, it recorded the former president's attitudes "as I sensed them."

In a statement Sunday night, former President Eisenhower disavowed Mundt's version of their talk. Mundt had described Eisenhower as critical of President Kennedy.

"I made no attempt," Mundt said Monday, "either to quote the President directly or to paraphrase his words with reference to his reactions to these matters." "I regret the fact the President feels I have misinterpreted his reactions to those areas of activity which he is in disagreement and

De Gaulle, Tunisian President See Hope For Algerian Peace

PARIS (AP)—President Charles de Gaulle and President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia declared themselves satisfied Monday there is hope for a rapid settlement of the bloody Algerian rebellion now dragging through its seventh year.

After daylong talks alone in the secluded presidential chateau at Rambouillet, the two leaders issued a guarded communique saying they were agreed there is a possibility "from this moment for a rapid and positive" settlement of the Algerian war.

They said they had examined the Algerian problem in a spirit of "frankness and mutual understanding." Bourguiba, acting primarily as a middleman between De Gaulle and the Algerian nationalists, joined the French president in declaring that the two men had found their views almost in accord on international problems.

The optimistic tone of the pronouncement appeared to indicate that direct peace talks between the French and Algerian rebels were in the offing, although the communique did not say specifically that such negotiations would be opened.

It has been generally accepted that the main purpose of the De Gaulle-Bourguiba conference was to seek the basis for such talks. Demonstrations on the Champs Elysees in Paris, 30 miles from the scene of Monday's talks, by embittered foes of negotiations with the rebels somewhat marred the Bourguiba visit.

De Gaulle and Bourguiba dined together in the great state luncheon room at Rambouillet after a long talk. They called in their aides and then shut themselves up together again. They finally issued the communique on their talks after dinner.

It was the first time the two had ever met. When De Gaulle last held power, Bourguiba, then considered by the French a dangerous political agitator, was in jail or virtual exile. When Bourguiba engineered his nation's independence, De Gaulle was out of office.

Monday's meeting also was the first time De Gaulle had ever unambiguously and sufficiently to probe genuine Algerian problem—"an internal French affair"—with any foreigner, let alone an Arab chief of state.

Praise for Kennedy's proposals has been tempered by union leaders at AFL-CIO Executive Council meetings here with criticism that in various respects they don't go far enough to revive the lagging economy.

Goldberg advised his former union colleagues to get wholeheartedly behind Kennedy's plans because, he said, they are based on a realistic appraisal of what Congress may be expected to approve. He reminded them some business organizations feel the proposals are too drastic.

Goldberg, former attorney for many AFL-CIO unions, brought to the closed council meeting a letter from Kennedy to George Meany, AFL-CIO president, in which the President said his program merits support of all elements in American life.

"It is my firm conviction," Kennedy's letter said, "that the various proposals for action that I am making will restore momentum to the American economy and strengthen our nation both at home and abroad."

Goldberg said that after presenting Kennedy's letter he told the 29-man AFL-CIO high command the administration's program is based "on the concept of reaching necessary goals in a realistic context of what is obtainable."

Goldberg Urges Labor Support Economic Plan

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg Monday assured critics of organized labor that President Kennedy's program represents the administration's best judgment of what is obtainable from Congress.

Praise for Kennedy's proposals has been tempered by union leaders at AFL-CIO Executive Council meetings here with criticism that in various respects they don't go far enough to revive the lagging economy.

Kennedy's Highway Message Due Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy will send Congress a special message Tuesday on highway construction.

The White House also said definitely that the President's farm message will not go to the Capitol before next week. There had been earlier indications it might be ready this week.

Press secretary Pierre Salinger said Kennedy will have another message ready this week, but that the subject would not be announced now.

State Courts Upheld In Use Of Wire-Tap

Tribunal Rejects Defiant Red Probe Witnesses' Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled 7-2 Monday that wire-tapping evidence may be used in state court criminal trials. This type of evidence is barred in federal courts.

In two other cases the high court rejected anew contentions that the First Amendment of the Constitution shields witnesses from having to answer questions of congressional Communist probes.

The wire-tapping case came from New York, where the state Constitution and laws permit police wire-tapping if it is authorized by a State Supreme Court justice.

New York Courts Upheld

The ruling upheld U.S. district and circuit courts in New York. These courts refused to bar use by the state of wire-tap evidence against Burton N. Pugach, a Bronx attorney accused of arranging a lie attack on his girl friend.

Chief Justice Earl Warren and Justice William O. Douglas dissented.

In New York, Pugach's counsel, George J. Todaro, commented that the ruling "for all practical purposes has destroyed the security of privacy that citizens are entitled to in their homes under the Federal Communications Act."

In separate 5-4 decisions, the court upheld contempt of Congress convictions of Carl Braden, Louisville, Ky., and Frank Wilkinson, Los Angeles.

The two challenged the authority of a subcommittee of the House Committee on Un-American Activities to question them during an investigation in Atlanta, Ga., July 30, 1958, about Communist activities in the South.

1959 Decision Cited

In their appeals, they relied mainly upon the First Amendment, which guarantees freedom of speech, press and assembly. The four dissenters were Warren and Justices Douglas, Hugo L. Black, and William J. Brennan. Justice Potter Stewart spoke for the majority in both cases. He cited the court's 5-4 decision of June 8, 1959, in the case of Lloyd Barenblatt, a former educator.

In this decision the court held the Committee on Un-American Activities may investigate the danger of overthrow of the government and said the Communist party is so closely related to this that the committee may ask a witness about past and present Communist party membership despite objections based on the first amendment.

Seizure Keeps Bandit Off FBI's Top 10 List

PUEBLO, Colo. (UPI) — Jack Wilkerson, who was to have been placed on the FBI's list of 10 most wanted men Tuesday, was captured here Monday by local police and FBI agents.

He was arrested, unarmed, in a Pueblo motel where he had been living since early in January. He did not resist.

Wilkerson, known variously as the "stripper bandit" and the "vodka drinking bandit," was arrested on a charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for robbery. He was believed responsible for a string of holdups in Tennessee and Georgia during the past several months.

Elizabeth Taylor Wins Her Fourth Oscar Nomination In As Many Years

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Elizabeth Taylor won her fourth Oscar nomination in four years Monday as the Motion Picture Academy announced nominees for the 33rd annual awards.

Miss Taylor, not yet a winner, was named for her performance as the wanton beauty in "Butterfield 8." She faces strong competition from three foreign born actresses and one American—Shirley MacLaine, the wistful elevator girl in "The Apartment."

Also nominated for best performance by an actress in 1960 were Greer Garson, as Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in "Sunrise at Campobello"; Deborah Kerr, the shepherd's wife in "The Sun-downers"; and Melina Mercouri, the Greek actress who portrayed a prostitute in "Never on Sunday."

Kasavubu's Soldiers Go On Rampage

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP) — Congolese soldiers have looted a campaign of rape and terror against U. N. personnel in Leopoldville, already imperiled by the advance of leftist rebels.

President Joseph Kasavubu and the United Nations Command in the Congo exchanged threats of force. Kasavubu's government sought aid from rebellious Katanga Province against the rebels now reported only 280 miles from Leopoldville.

In the midst of the tension, G. Mennen Williams, U. S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, arrived in Leopoldville on his African tour. He declined to comment on the latest Congolese developments.

Congolese soldiers, reported angered because the U. N. Command has done nothing to stop rebel leader Antoine Gizenga's soldiers in their march toward Leopoldville, went on the rampage Sunday night and early Monday.

In one attack, a woman working for U. N. headquarters was taken from a car and raped repeatedly by Congolese soldiers while her escort, an unarmed Sudanese officer of the U. N. Command, was forced to look on at gunpoint. The U. N. refused to disclose any details of the woman's identity or nationality. A U. N. spokesman described the attack upon her as "a heinous assault."

Other unarmed U. N. personnel were hauled from cars and manhandled. Four Canadians were forced to run nearly a mile over rocky ground in their bare feet while soldiers beat them with rifles.

U. N. headquarters sent a stiff note to Kasavubu warning that such attacks will not be tolerated and will be resisted with full force. U. N. trucks rumbled through the capital, emphasizing that the command was ready to use the force authorized by the Security Council last week to keep peace in the Congo.

Shortly thereafter, Kasavubu called for a general mobilization and in a radio address told each Congolese army military commander "to open fire if necessary against anyone who opposes the mission to which he is assigned."

Would Lessen A-War Risk, Rusk Believes

Shift Away From Policy Of Massive Retaliation Hinted

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk has recommended a big step-up in nonatomic forces of America and its allies in order to lessen the danger of a nuclear war.

Rusk's views were given to Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara in a secret paper.

State Department press officer Lincoln White, while declining to specify what Rusk had recommended, Monday night denounced as "the grossest distortion of the views of the Department of State" one version of the Rusk recommendations published by The Washington Star Monday. The Star story described Rusk's position as this:

"1. Use of the big missiles and bombers carrying atomic weapons should be confined to deterrence of attacks on this country and its allies in order to lessen the danger of 'nuclear blackmail.'"

"2. Attacks on Europe should be met with 'conventional,' nonnuclear weapons unless the enemy started to use nuclear weapons."

"3. Limited aggressions outside Europe should be handled by our troops rather than those of our Allies, and we should use nonnuclear weapons in meeting such aggression."

Probe Of Leak Launched

Kennedy administration authorities promptly started an inquiry to find out who had leaked information to the press on the Rusk document.

Rusk favored retaining discretion as to the place and time nuclear weapons might be used in case of Red attack.

But in a shift away from the "massive retaliation" policy once enunciated by the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, Rusk sought a strengthening of conventional forces to combat Communist aggressions that might be staved off without unleashing atomic destruction.

Rusk was said to have made his recommendations for McNamara's use in the Defense Department's broad review of U. S. strategy. McNamara's studies have been completed and sent to the White House.

Officials said there was no split between the views of Rusk and McNamara in this letter and that the heart of it is implicit in moves already made by President Kennedy.

Kennedy's Order Cited

For example, Kennedy has ordered a strengthening of airlift capability to fight brush-fire wars. And the Army has been training men in small numbers for special service in combatting guerrilla attacks.

One theory underlying the Kennedy administration's thinking is that smaller outbreaks of fighting are more likely to occur around the world than a direct Soviet nuclear assault.

Another belief is that, with its conventional forces too thin, the West is limited to atomic retaliation as its only method of hitting back in case of attack.

Rusk's paper dealt mainly with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the forces involving (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Kennedy Seen On Russian TV

MOSCOW (AP)—In an unprecedented gesture the Soviet Union Monday night televised films of two of President Kennedy's news conferences.

From the program the Soviet public got a broad hint that Premier Khrushchev may visit New York for part of the U. N. General Assembly next month.

The screenings coincided with the arrival in Moscow of U. S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson, who came back from Washington bearing a message from Kennedy to Khrushchev.

The message is reported to be a reaffirmation that Thompson has the full confidence of Kennedy and expressing hope that talks between the ambassador and the premier will better Soviet-American relations.

An announcement before the TV show said the Kennedy news conferences were being carried at the request of the United States as part of the Soviet-American cultural exchange agreement.

The program was entirely translated into Russian which was superimposed on the original English, making it difficult to hear many of the words.

Castro Appeal Seen Desperation Move

WASHINGTON (AP)—U. S. officials Monday viewed Cuba's appeal to the United Nations and the Organization of American States as an act of desperation and deception by the Fidel Castro regime. They said the facts simply do not give any credence whatever to the bearded rebel's promise last weekend that Cuba will not try to spread Castro's revolution to other Latin American republics.

He has been trying his best for many months to do just that and has been detected in half a dozen cases, officials said.

The Castro government delivered in Havana during the week-end a 22-page document promising not to intervene in internal af-

Little Girl's Slayer Eludes Police Dragnet

NEW YORK (AP)—The sex slayer of Edith (Gogie) Kiecorius, 4, beat her to death with a blunt instrument, an autopsy report disclosed late Monday.

The finding spurred the manhunt for a toothless vagabond, 59 years old, chief suspect in the case.

Chief Medical Examiner Milton Helper said the child's skull and face had been crushed beneath the blows of some sort of instrument.

The blonde child's body was found Sunday in a West Side rooming house. Three times during a five-day search for the girl, detectives had approached the room. But each time its locked door thwarted them. When they finally broke it down, her slayer already had a head start of days on his pursuers.

More than 200 detectives were assigned to pick up the trail of Fred Thompson, a former nightclub doorman. His fingerprints matched those found on beer cans in the Chelsea district room, where the girl's body was found.

In addition, everyone on the 24,000-man New York police force took an indirect hand in the manhunt, and a description of Thompson was flashed coast to coast.

New York police concentrated on Bowery dives in quest of Thompson, last seen an hour or so before little Edith vanished from a tenement sidewalk where she was playing on Washington's Birthday.

State Escapes Major Flooding

By The Associated Press
Crest on the Susquehanna River was reached Monday night without any major flood damage being reported.

Officials at Conowingo opened 22 of the dam's flood gates by 6 p.m., but plans to open a 23rd were halted when it became apparent that the crest would pass without difficulty.

The two regulating gates of the dam, which had been opened earlier in the day, also were closed as the crest passed.

Minor flooding was reported in the Conowingo area, and water spilling over from the swollen Susquehanna forced closure of U. S. 222 between Port Deposit and the dam.

About a quarter-mile section of the highway actually was under three to four feet of water, but the flooding blocked traffic over a five-mile length of the road which parallels the river in northern Maryland.

Freeman Calls For Farm Job Aid Program

WASHINGTON (AP)—The secretary of agriculture told Congress Monday rural America has its full share of stubborn unemployment.

Secretary Orville L. Freeman said he wants to encourage a variety of enterprises—from wood-working plants to game farms for city hunters—to create job opportunities.

Testifying in favor of the Kennedy administration's multimillion-dollar loan and grant program for chronically depressed areas, Freeman told a House Banking subcommittee underemployment on farms is equivalent to a 1.4-million addition to the nation's jobless total.

The administration estimates the unemployed figure, not counting underemployed, at about 5.5 million.

Freeman conceded that underemployment—work involuntarily limited to less than a normal work week—is difficult to compute on a farm. But he said 45 of every 100 farm operators do some gainful work off their farms.

And he said research specialists in his department calculate that "there is enough underemployment each year among workers 20 to 64 years of age who live on farms to equal a full year of unemployment for 1,400,000 workers."

Freeman said "agribusinesses"—small industrial developments tied to farm operations, such as poultry processing plants or convenience food factories—could be one objective of a program to reduce farm unemployment.

He was invited to comment on testimony given last year by spokesmen for President Dwight D. Eisenhower's administration. They were quoted as implying there was no solution to some farm poverty except to move people off unproductive land.

Would Lessen

European allies, the core of the U. S. global defense set-up.

Officials who disputed the Star story said:

1. No one has suggested that a massive attack on Europe should be met by conventional weapons alone.

2. Nor has it been proposed that Communist aggressions outside Europe be fought by American troops using conventional weapons, instead of by troops of the country under attack.

GE Chairman Cordiner Quits As NBAC Head

NEW YORK (AP)—Chairman Ralph J. Cordiner of General Electric Co. resigned Monday as chairman of the National Business Advisory Council to take over the GE presidency from retiring Robert Paxton.

Besides holding the chairmanship and presidency of the company, Cordiner will continue as a member of the council, which advises Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges. Hodges said in Boston he had no comment.

Cordiner announced that Paxton, 59, was retiring because of ill health after serving as president since April 23, 1958.

The GE chairman said he was quitting the council chairmanship against the wishes of members because "my time and attention must be devoted solely to the affairs of the company."

A question over Cordiner's continuance in the council chairmanship was raised after GE and 28 other electrical equipment manufacturing companies were fined nearly $2 million in antitrust actions charging rigging of bids and prices.

Seven executives of the companies, including three GE officials, were sentenced to 30 days in jail.

Cordiner's announcement that he was quitting as council chairman and that Paxton was retiring a year in advance of plans made no mention of the antitrust case. Cordiner and Paxton were not involved in the government's allegations.

Cordiner said Paxton's retirement was "precipitated by the need for a continuing period of convalescence following major surgery in January."

Kaplan Reappointed To U. Of Md. Board

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Gov. Tawes belatedly completed his list of executive nominations Monday night by nominating Dr. Louis L. Kaplan for another seven years on the University of Maryland Board of Regents.

The position of the Baltimore doctor was the only one missing when the governor sent his so-called list of green bag appointments to the Senate for confirmation last Wednesday.

"I was waiting for certain information," the governor explained.

English Miners Strike

DONCASTER, England (AP)—A wildcat strike shut 29 Yorkshire collieries Monday and left more than 36,000 miners idle. The strikers, defying union appeals to go back, are demanding a 10 per cent wage increase.

Gliding was primarily developed in Germany.

Mother Testifies As 16-Year-Old Boy Goes On Trial In Slaying Of Father

LA PLATA, Md. (AP) — The mother of 16-year-old Christopher Mickler said she was on her way to seek psychiatric help for him on the day he is accused of slaying his father with a shotgun.

S. Albert Mickler, 54, a former Washington, D. C., attorney, was slain Nov. 14 in his Port Tobacco home. Christopher went on trial for murder in Circuit Court Monday.

Mrs. Mickler, trembling as she testified, did not look at her son as she told how he had run away twice and how she found a "murder plan" written in his hand on his bedside table.

She said that on Nov. 14 she had left for Washington to visit, do some shopping and see a child psychiatrist. She said her husband had been reluctant to permit outside help for the boy until she found the murder plan.

Mrs. Mickler said her son had been "withdrawn" since he ran away for 12 days in April of last year.

He ran away a second time in October, and was picked up in Washington, Mrs. Mickler said, "but as soon as he was back he told me he was going away again." She added:

"But we had never seen him do anything violent. . . his father said not to get help because he would be marked for life."

Details of the "murder plan" were not brought out.

Pa. Rep. Walter Plans To Retire From Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Francis E. Walter, D-Pa., chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, said Monday he will not seek re-election.

Walter, now serving his 15th two-year term, gave health as the reason for retiring from Congress after the current session.

He told newsmen he first disclosed to members of the Democratic Executive Committee in his home county of Northampton that his present term, would be his last.

Walter said his health difficulty is a respiratory one. He said doctors have told him he should go to another climate.

Walter, 66, is dean of the Pennsylvania congressional delegation.

Walter said he does not favor enlarging the House membership, as has been proposed in some quarters, in order to avoid loss of congressional seats by some states. Congress is due to act this year on reapportionment, following population shifts shown by the 1960 census.

Pennsylvania is due to lose three House seats, dropping from 30 to 27 members, unless the House membership is enlarged.

Walter is a native of Easton, Pa. He was educated at George Washington University and Georgetown Law School here.

Retired Marine General Succumbs

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — William Keith Enright, retired Marine Corps brigadier general, died Monday at the Naval Hospital after a short illness. He was 52 years old and a 1932 graduate of the Naval Academy.

Survivors include his widow, Dolores, of Annapolis; a daughter, Marguerite, of Washington, and a son, William K. Enright Jr., Annapolis.

Funeral services will be held here Wednesday followed by interment in the Academy cemetery.

Coast Guard Ocean Research Bill Planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., said Monday he plans to introduce legislation to let the Coast Guard conduct ocean research anywhere in the world and to acquire necessary equipment for the research.

Magnuson, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee which handles Coast Guard legislation, said the service now is limited by law to research in connection with its ice patrol.

If the restrictions are removed, he said in a statement, the Coast Guard could "make a tremendous contribution to our knowledge of the oceans at a minimum of cost."

German-Born Judges Will Try Eichmann

JERUSALEM (AP) — Three German-born judges who came to Israel when it was still British mandated Palestine in 1933 will try Adolf Eichmann for war crimes April 11, the government announced Sunday.

President of the three-judge court will be Justice Moshe Landau, a member of the Israeli Supreme Court who was born in Danzig in 1912. His two colleagues will be Dr. Benyamin Halevy and Izhak Raveh.

Census Shows Racial Shift In Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — The non-white population of Baltimore increased 45 per cent between 1950 and 1960 while the total number of whites declined 15 per cent.

The non-white population showed a remarkable 88 per cent increase in the 15-and-under age group, jumping from 63,083 to 119,745 during the 10-year span.

The young white population dropped 5 per cent, from 162,239 to 153,681, while whites in the 65-and-over group showed a 12 per cent boost, from 60,409 to 68,919.

Dr. Matthew L. Tayback, a metropolitan census official who released the figures Monday, attributed the racial shift during the past 10 years to "selective migration."

Dr. Tayback said young whites are moving to the suburbs while older whites remain in the city.

The percentage of whites over 65 is 11.3 per cent of the total population, compared with a national average for the age group of 8 per cent.

The white population as a whole dropped from 723,655 to 609,812. The non-whites, at least 98 per cent of whom are Negro, jumped from 226,053 to 329,212.

Baltimore's total 1960 population of 939,024 ranks the city as the nation's sixth largest.

Workman Swept Down River After Trestle Collapse

PORTSMOUTH, Ohio (AP) — One workman was swept more than six miles down the swollen Ohio River Monday and two other workmen suffered minor injuries in collapse of a 1,000-foot trestle. It was being used on the Greenup Dam construction site 14 miles east of Portsmouth.

Scioto County volunteer firemen rescued James E. Walden, 37, of Greenup, Ky., as he clung to a floating tree section.

The flooding river caused collapse of the trestle. Walden, thrown 43 feet into the river, grabbed a floating tree and was swept downstream. The other workmen, Thomas D. Lowry, 40, of Portsmouth, and Charles Ball of Greenup, managed to grab hold of a ladder and climb to safety. They suffered only bruises.

The river was at the 45-foot level, a few feet below flood stage.

Caroline Kennedy Tells Of Barefoot Dad

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Barefoot Daddy Just Sits There," reads the headline on a page-one item in the Washington Post.

The story tells of 3-year-old Caroline Kennedy, the President's daughter, wandering into the communications room at the White House. She was asked what her Daddy was doing.

"He's not doing anything," she replied, "he's just sitting up there with his shoes and socks off doing nothing."

Byrd Heads D. C. Unit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., Monday was named chairman of the Senate appropriations subcommittee for the District of Columbia.

An aide of Byrd said the appointment gives Byrd his first Senate subcommittee chairmanship.

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — Gov. Tawes, members of the Maryland Legislature and leading businessmen throughout the state gave endorsement to Maryland's Civil Air Patrol Monday by becoming patrons of the organization.

CAP is celebrating its 20th anniversary this year.

SAVAGE, Md. (AP) — Fire gutted a one-story boat showroom near here Monday and did an estimated $30,000 damage. Philip E. Gibson, owner of the business, said the damage included $10,000 in boat material and $20,000 in equipment and accessories.

Traffic was tied up on U. S. 1 for six miles each way as firemen battled the blaze. Cause of the fire was not determined.

BALTIMORE (AP) — A 35-year-old prisoner walked away from the Maryland Penitentiary here Sunday while assigned to sweep a walk outside the walls.

The prisoner, Joseph Lorenzo Collins, was committed to the institution in October, 1958. He was serving a five-year term for assault and robbery.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jobless workers here received more in welfare aid during the first two weeks in February than in the entire month of January, a Baltimore Welfare Department spokesman said Monday.

The large jump forced the department to request additional funds from the state to aid persons who are capable of working but have been unable to find jobs, a spokesman said.

BOAC Will Extend Routes To Baltimore

WASHINGTON (AP) — British Overseas Airways Corp. Monday announced plans to extend its London-New York and London-Boston jet routes to Baltimore in June.

The new service will operate out of Baltimore's Friendship International Airport.

BOAC said four round trip flights will be operated during the first week in June. Starting June 9 there will be daily flights either by way of New York or Boston.

Bark, a waste product of the lumber industry, is now being converted into an unusually effective soil builder.

Unemployment In Md. Sets New DES Record

BALTIMORE (AP) — Maryland unemployment for January was greater than during any month since the Department of Employment Security began compiling official employment records in 1950.

The department said there were 87,000 Marylanders without jobs, representing 7.8 per cent of the state's total labor force of 1,109,000.

Both the number of jobless and the rate of joblessness exceeded the previous highs of January, 1959. Unemployed that month were 80,500 persons — 7.6 per cent of the labor force.

January unemployment also was up 12,600 from the 74,400 jobless the previous month.

DES Executive Director Robert B. Kimble attributed both the monthly and year-ago increases to a variety of seasonal and non-seasonal factors. He said extreme winter weather of the 30-day period brought most outdoor activities to a virtual standstill and adversely affected other industries as well.

Phi Omicron Delta Will Be National Affiliate

Phi Omicron Delta, local sorority at Frostburg State Teachers College, will become affiliated with Alpha Xi Delta, national social fraternity, in a formal pledging ceremony, which will be held Saturday.

It will become Gamma Psi Chapter of Alpha Xi Delta, in the pledging ceremony, at 3 p.m., at the Ali Ghan Country Club. After the 21 members of the local sorority are pledged to national, they will assist in the ceremony for 20 pledges to Phi Omicron Delta.

Miss Dorothy Stone White, member of Iota Chapter, Alpha Xi Delta of West Virginia University, has worked with Miss Darleen Van Roon, Washington, president of Phi Omicron Delta, in effecting the national affiliation. Miss White will serve as toastmaster. The invocation will be given by Dr. Lucille Ann Clay, Dr. Alice Manicor, dean of students, is to extend greetings from the administration. The province president and second vice president of the national council will greet the girls on behalf of the national organization. The program will terminate with singing of sorority songs by the active members of the various college chapters.

Miss Josephine Roe, membership chairman of Beta Chi Chapter, at Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa., will be one of the group conducting the pledge ceremony. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Roe, Frostburg. Others to assist in the pledge ceremony will be the president of Theta province; one of the members of the national council; and local Alpha Xi Delta Alumnae. The latter include Mrs. Kirk McKee, whose husband is dean at Potomac State College, Mrs. Willis H. Hann, whose husband is the retired superintendent at the gas company of Ellerslie, both members of Iota Chapter at West Virginia University; Mrs. Robert Crump, Mrs. Glenn Burke, both of Beta Eta Chapter, University of Maryland, whose husbands are at ABL, and Mrs. George Louis Spoerl, Jr., of Beta Chi, Gettysburg College.

Following the pledging a buffet supper will be held, honoring the newly-pledged members. The decorations are to be the pink lily, the rose and "double blue and gold" official colors of Alpha Xi Delta.

The formal installation of the chapter will be held May 19 by a national representative.

Medical Assistants Roster Being Compiled

The Medical Assistants of the Allegany-Garrett County Medical Association is working on a project to set up a roster of permanent and temporary medical assistants for use by local physicians.

Mrs. Virginia Keller conducted the dinner meeting, which was held at Clarysville Inn. She appointed Mrs. Virginia Connor chairman of the committee, to be assisted by Mrs. Mary Alexander and Mrs. Mabel Young. Anyone with experience as a medical assistant and who would like her name added to this roster, is asked to contact Mrs. Connor at HO 3-2124. The project has received approval of the Allegany-Garrett County Medical Society.

In observance of the group's first birthday, the dinner table was decorated with a birthday cake, topped by a miniature medical assistant.

After the dinner Dr. Mikio Kato of Frostburg talked on the Tanager Island, accompanied by slides. This was followed by a question and answer period.

The March meeting will be held on the 22nd, due to the regular date falling in Holy Week. Dr. W. Royce Hodges will be guest speaker at the dinner meeting, which will be held at the Cumberland Country Club. His topic is "Flying Physicians."

Also at the March meeting delegates will be named for the state meeting, which will be held in Baltimore, April 26-27-28. As it will be held at the same time as the medical meeting, the assistants will entertain the doctors at a coffee booth. It is to be April 27 at the Alcazar. Dr. George M. Simons, Cumberland, president of the Allegany-Garrett Medical Society, will speak Wednesday at the state meeting.

$129,000 Requested For Street Repairs

The Engineering Department has recommended and the Street Department urged the Mayor and Council to place on the agenda for immediate discussion a plan to repair winter damage to streets.

Involved is an estimated $129,000 which includes the following: $125,000 for the planning and resurfacing of the business section of town; $2,800 for labor and materials to patch potholes in paved streets, exclusive of downtown and the Wineow Street subway; and $1,300 for placing a two-inch blacktop wearing course through the Wineow Street subway to maintain traffic the next 12 months until the State Roads Commission is ready to go ahead with its schedule for a Wineow overpass.

In addition, Street Commissioner John J. Long told council yesterday, he would like to give consideration to the Bedford Street Extension project, the cost of which is estimated at $80,000.

City Engineer Charles R. Nuzum submitted the report to council and said during the past several days the department has inspected all paved streets. He said if any conclusion is drawn, it must be remembered that four weeks of winter remain during which streets will continue to deteriorate.

Long was authorized by council to advertise for bids on the Wineow subway blacktop project.

Nuzum pointed out that the SRC schedule for starting a contract for a new Wineow bridge indicates award of a contract the latter part of October and the possibility of the city being responsible for maintaining traffic there until late spring, 1962. He said the new blacktop and patch of the surface would be the only way in which traffic can be maintained in the subway the next 12 months.

He said Cumberland's downtown streets are in need of a general restoration program. To correct the situation he recommended the following procedure:

Plane off the top two inches of blacktop with a heater-planer similar to work done in 1956-57.

At that time only ripples were removed, but this time two inches would be removed so when a new wearing course is added, curbs will not disappear and water run over the sidewalks.

Over the smoothed streets, a new wearing course approximately seven-eighths of an inch thick would be placed. This will further smooth and seal streets so they will give many more years of service.

Recommended for reconditioning are Baltimore Street from the Western Maryland Railway to B&O Railroad; South Mechanic Street from Baltimore Street to Williams Street; North Mechanic Street from Baltimore to Henderson Avenue; Bedford Street from Centre to North Mechanic; North Centre Street from Baltimore to Mechanic; South Centre Street from Baltimore to Williams; Frederick Street from Mechanic to the B&O, and Route 40 from North Centre to the city limits.

Actual cost of planning would be $119,720 but $5,280 for contingencies would raise the amount to $125,000.

City Passes Ordinance On Street Work

The Mayor and Council yesterday passed an ordinance calling for the resurfacing of Central Avenue from Park Street to Maryland Avenue and while no outright opposition to the proposal developed, residents of the area appeared on a number of other matters.

George Keady, 215 Central Avenue, appeared to ask about the condition of an alley and drainage which was running over his property. This was referred to the Street and Engineering Departments.

J. B. Ziler of 210 Central Avenue, flayed the gas company for drilling the street and then not filling the holes. He charged that the utility line is "decayed" and should be replaced before the street is resurfaced or the new street will be torn up again and the property owners have to pay for it.

City Engineer Charles R. Nuzum said "as a general practice" the gas company fills holes when it drills streets. Ziler said the company did not do it this time and Nuzum said he would investigate.

Ziler, a retired B&O employee on pension, said he "did not like to be treated like this" in referring such moves affecting his property.

Mrs. Edith B. Northcraft, 212 Central, who said she rents but is a taxpayer, also urged that gas lines be renewed before the new surface is placed. She also cited a bad parking situation which blocks the street sweeper and added that her particular section of the street had not been cleaned for five years.

Street Commissioner John J. Long said he thought she had a good point and that if the Police Department would remove the cars, his department will sweep the street.

Mrs. Okey R. Metheny, 218 Park Street, said her property is on a corner lot and is encircled by a red "no parking" line. She thought this unfair and did not see why she should pay for a street improvement from which she is denied parking benefits. Mrs. Metheny said she and her husband had received parking tickets when they stopped in front of their house to carry in groceries.

Also appearing before council was Clayton Blume, of 736 Baker Street, in connection with a proposed parking ban on that street. He, too, was referred to Fleming.

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My boy friend but I think if I told him all about it he would be very disappointed in me. He'd rather sing than eat and that's the problem. If he'd sing less we would eat better.

Chuck works part-time because he must be free to rehearse at odd hours with visiting choral groups. He also takes singing engagements for luncheon clubs which means a cut-up day.

We've been married 12 years and have three children. If I didn't work full time we'd never make it. Chuck is a wonderful husband and father except for his one fault. I want him to stop the music nonsense so I can relax a little. He says I agreed to this arrangement before we married, which is right — I did. But now I'm ready to tell him to quit the Road to Mandalay and take it. What's your advice? — TONE DEAF

DEAR DEAF: Stop beating yourself — eight to the bar. You made a bargain, now stick to it.

A wife doesn't tell a wonderful husband and father to take the road to Mandalay because he works only part-time and she must help out. Many talented stars who rake in the loot by the bushel-basket struggled for a long time before they hit it big. It could happen to Chuck.

DEAR ANN: What can be done about a close friend who is nice in many ways but who has a habit that drives me buggy? This woman will interrupt everyone and anyone to express her own views. She never waits for the speaker to draw a breath, much less finish a sentence. She just sails right in.

I've seen people try without success to get back to what they were saying before she interrupted. This woman is so skilled at taking over a conversation that it's virtually impossible to wrest the floor from her. Is there an answer? — CUT SHORT

DEAR CUT SHORT: First — how important is the friendship? It occurs to me that this overpowering, all-knowing type might not be worth the effort it takes to get along with her.

If you want to effect a cure there's only one way. When she cuts in just continue to talk — in a louder voice and ignore her. If she's still with it after three or four sentences say: "You have a bad habit of interrupting people. I wish you would be courteous enough to let me finish — then you may have the floor."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm almost 18 and went steady with a boy for two years. I thought it was love and nobody could tell me different. I went too far with him, but I was very lucky. I got off scot-free, except for my conscience.

Now I'm going with another fellow (I'll call him Dick) who treats me with the greatest respect. I feel guilty about my first

QUESTION:

When was Inland Marine insurance, in its present form, developed?

ANSWER:

Within the past 50 years. Actually, the oldest form of insurance recorded was more nearly Inland Marine insurance since it concerned loss of goods being carried by caravan between India & Persia.

FABULOUS! MIGHTY! JOURNEY TO THE LOST CITY IN COLORSCOPE

City Seeks Urban Renewal This Session

The Mayor and Council yesterday authorized City Attorney William R. Carscaden to prepare a bill for introduction at this session of the Maryland Legislature in connection with "Redevelopment-Urban Renewal."

The bill would give the city powers to engage in such urban renewal programs—including removal of blight and slum areas—and to qualify for certain federal funds.

The Maryland Municipal League had proposed one bill to cover 17 state cities but the office of the attorney general ruled that one bill must be introduced for each of the cities involved.

In other action yesterday, council authorized payment of $87.50 to National Institute of Municipal Law Officers for a subscription to the Municipal Law Journal.

Council annulled then reenacted an order reducing the assessment on a lot owned by Virginia Newman Miller at 1915 Frederick Street. The order said the assessment would be reduced 75 percent since three-fourths of the property is outside the city limits. However, the assessment on the building remains unchanged.

A proclamation was approved designating March 12-18 as "Pythian Week."

Street Commissioner John J. Long suggested that council write Commonwealth prime ministers a letter to visiting teams which to pay a short visit to Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

To Visit Germany

BOON (UPI) — South African Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd will visit West Germany some time next month, a government spokesman said Monday. Verwoerd will interrupt his stay at the London conference of British Commonwealth prime ministers to pay a short visit to Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

W. Va. Liquor Bill Is Killed By Two Votes

Just Shy Of Need Two-Thirds Margin

By BILL BARRETT
CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—Now that the proposed liquor referendum has been junked in the House of Delegates its only matter of 36 hours or so before the State Senate creates "Marshall University."

A bill to give Marshall College university status was delayed temporarily Monday in the Senate when proponents of the liquor referendum, then pending before the House, won approval of a last-ditch maneuver to win support for their whiskey resolution.

But it failed. The liquor referendum, needing two-thirds majority for passage (67 votes), was killed on a 65-35 roll call. But most Senate backers of the measure indicated afterwards that they would honor previous commitments to support the change in status for Marshall.

Sen. Lyle D. Cabell, one of the sponsors of the Marshall U. measure said he expected to vote in favor of the bill to be about the same as when it last was before the chamber. It passed then on a 20-11 vote only to be amended and sidetracked in the House.

Hedrick Asks Delay
The unamended House version was at second reading in the Senate Monday when that chamber convened for a 30-minute session, one hour ahead of the House. Sen. O. H. Hedrick, D-Marion, won by a narrow 17-15 vote, approval of a motion to withhold consideration for another day. It was a strategic move since Hedrick was one sponsor of the pending liquor legislation in the House.

Now the Marshall bill will be at second reading Tuesday and passage likely will come Wednesday.

The House, in other action, passed 98-1 and sent to the Senate a bill to increase the tax on pari-mutuel horse racing bets from 5 to 6 per cent and to capture 15, instead of 14, per cent of the breakage pool left over when bets are paid off.

The measure had the support of the Barron administration and legislative leadership and is one of the tax measures being used to replace those originally recommended by Barron which would have increased certain gross sales tax rates.

In other legislative action, the House sent four bills to Gov. Barron for signature, including measures to:

— Give West Virginia University authority to establish graduate centers in business administration (98-1).

— Make it legal for precinct officials to provide assistance to blind persons while voting (99-0).

LOWELL MARTIN SOWERS

FSTC Instructor Dies In Hospital

Lowell Martin Sowers, 60, Lonaconing, a member of the faculty of Frostburg State Teachers College, died yesterday in Memorial Hospital.

Mr. Sowers was born in Clear Spring, Md., on November 13, 1900, and earned his bachelor of science degree at Gettysburg College.

He earned his master of arts degree at the University of Maryland, and studied at several colleges to earn credits beyond his Master's degree.

Mr. Sowers taught mathematics and English at Clear Spring High School in 1924-25; personal hygiene at Patterson Park School in Baltimore in 1925-26; and science at Central High School in Lonaconing from 1928 to 1943.

In the interim between 1943 and December 13, 1950, when he was employed at State Teachers College, Frostburg, Md. Sowers was an analytical chemist at the Celanese Fibers of America for a period of five years. He was a laboratory technician at Phipps Psychiatric Clinic of Johns Hopkins Hospital.

At the Frostburg college, Mr. Sowers was employed as an instructor in the science department. He worked very closely with Memorial Hospital School of Nursing in instructing student nurses.

In addition to his teaching duties he worked to recruit students for the college from many counties of the state. The fact that the enrollment at the college had doubled within the past several years can be attributed largely to his outstanding work in recruitment, college officials said today.

"The college has lost an instructor dedicated to the education of youth and dedicated throughout years in his devotion and loyalty to Frostburg State Teachers College," said R. Bowen Hardesty, president of the college.

He was a son of the late Charles F. and Ann Elizabeth (Heller) Sowers.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Margaret (Hohing) Sowers; a son, Lowell M. Sowers Jr., Frostburg; a daughter, Mrs. Susan Powers, Riverdale, Md.; two sisters, Mrs. Ralph Fiery, Hagerstown, and Mrs. Frank O. Seibert, Clear Spring; three brothers, Frederick and Lester Sowers, both of Shippensburg, and James Day Sowers, Bluefield, W. Va., and three grandchildren.

Mr. Sowers was a member of First Presbyterian Church of Lonaconing, the Lonaconing Rotary Club, and the Masonic Lodge.

His body is at the Eichhorn Funeral Home in Lonaconing where the family will receive friends from 2 to 4 p. m. and 7 to 9 p. m.

The body will be taken to First Presbyterian Church at 9:30 a. m. on Wednesday for services at 10:30 a. m. Rev. Chalmers Goshorn and Rev. John McClain will officiate and interment will be in St. Paul's Cemetery at Clear Spring.

MRS. FREELAND RITES

A requiem mass for Mrs. Elizabeth M. Freeland, 78, of 238 Humbird Street, who died Saturday in Memorial Hospital, will be celebrated tomorrow at 11 a. m. at St. Mary's Catholic Church. Burial will be in the parish cemetery.

Palbearers will be Harold W. Davis, Frederick Bloom, Charles Griffith, Robert Washbaugh, Philmore Fleming and Albert M. Kerns Jr.

The body is at the Scarpelli Funeral Home where the Sodality will recite the rosary today at 8 p. m.

Shadow Issues In Depressed Area Bill

Depressed area legislation resumes its somewhat halting progress through the Senate today when a subcommittee of the Banking and Currency Committee takes testimony from three Cabinet officials—commerce Secretary Hodges, Labor Secretary Goldberg, and Agriculture Secretary Freeman. This trio should appease Republicans who had complained that no key Kennedy Administration witnesses had made appearances before the group.

Actually, the legislative situation on the area redevelopment problem is far from clear, and it may have been muddled by President Kennedy's dispatch of his own bill to Congress. His measure differs in several important respects from the bill introduced by Sen. Paul Douglas (D-Ill.).

A unified Democratic approach to area redevelopment legislation may be crucial to the bill's success in a doubting House of Representatives. House members are reported edgy over the lack of an effective "anti-pirating" provision to prevent subsidized migration of industry from their states to others. At the same time doubts have been expressed whether the most chronically depressed regions can attract enough new industry to solve their economic ills under any government-backed program.

Commerce Secretary Hodges hinted at the shadow issues in depressed area legislation when he blurted out (on "Meet the Press"): "I am going to say something that will probably sound very revolutionary. I don't think even Mr. Douglas would want to mention it. You may have to retrain and resettle some people in . . . particular cases."

Hodges was aware, no doubt, that government-assisted relocation of workers is politically offensive, not only to Congressmen who don't want to lose constituents and possibly their seats, but also to many workers and business interests in the depressed areas. Nevertheless, the relocation aspect deserves a full airing, and it should be clear from Hodges' remarks that this has not been received.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

The Problems Of Change

Change for change sake is a theory of the accelerated production of goods. If styles, for instance, did not change, a dress might last many years and thousands of persons would be without work. If we ate the same food every day, even if we could stand the monotony, it would impoverish farmers, grocers, restaurant owners, etc.

On the other hand, change must be rational and when we move from one commodity to another, dislocating communities, impoverishing people, we need to know what we are doing. An excellent example of what the substitution of one product for another means in the lives of people is the use of imported residual oil instead of coal. Practically all of the residual oil comes to this country from Venezuela and we are allowing it to come in as a sort of good neighbor policy, just as the American people pay an outlandish price for coffee to please Brazil, Colombia and other coffee-growing countries.

But the importation of residual oil has brought such poverty to the people of the State of West Virginia that they are back in the ugliness of the Depression. Several years ago, I called attention in this column to the peril to the coal industry which was then dying and I was attacked with undue violence by those who said that the world could never do without coal. Increasingly, the world has learned how to substitute other products for coal, just as the day is not distant when atomic energy or some other device, perhaps solar energy, will produce the light and heat and power that we require. But what will become of people? What will they do for a living? Will our society so change that we shall know how to provide for a workless population?

Residual oil is an excellent example of the mischief that can be done to human beings. As Senator Robert C. Byrd said:

"If one does not believe that the results have been tragic, one has only to come to West Virginia to see the results—to see thousands of highly skilled miners unable to obtain work and to see their families existing on a diet that is unbelievably meager."

Coal mine employment has dropped from 125,000 men in 1948 to less than 38,000 now. The reason: coal is not used in 1961 as much as it was used in 1948.

Residual oil is not advantageous, except that it is cheaper. In a word, as we become increasingly inventive and increasingly smart in the handling of new chemicals and new devices, shall we throw more and more men and women out of work? This was a question that the Luddites asked in 1811-1816, when they sought to prevent the application of steam to machinery and locomotion. Their answer proved wrong. Machines made jobs. The more machinery, the greater the output, the more jobs became available at higher wages and families lived on an increasingly higher standard of life. This was the moral advantage of the Industrial Revolution.

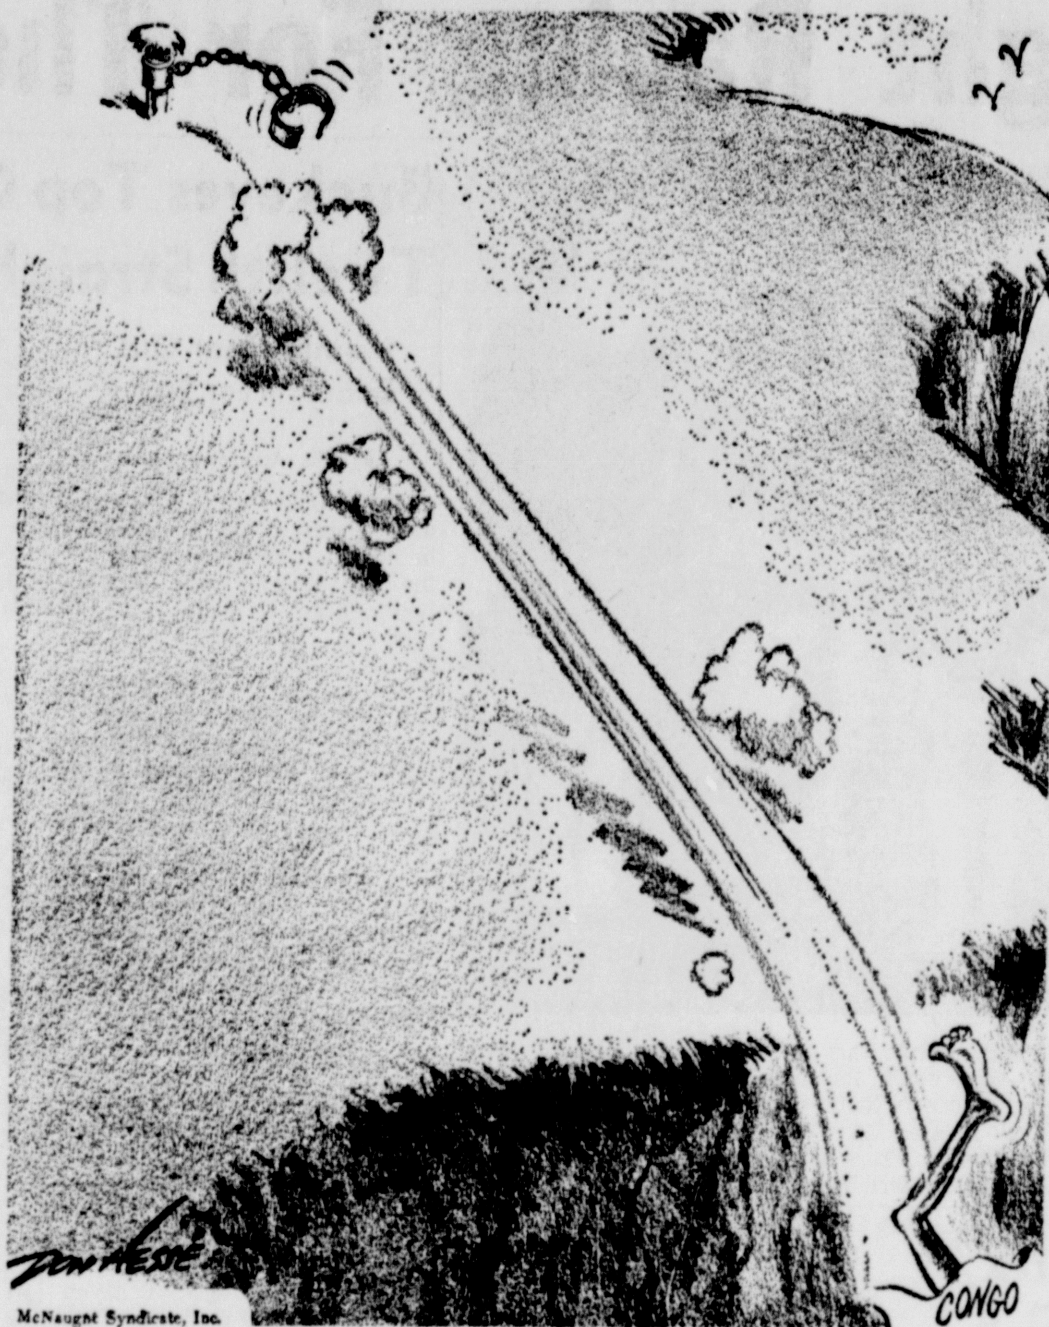

Have we reached the end of this constructive era? Or are we in a new era, a period of human history which we do not understand and the consequences of which we cannot foresee? No one can prophesy what will be style and fashion of another age. What, for instance, has happened to the great silk industry? Rayon, nylon, orlon and many other products are used as substitutes for various silk and women's products and even for furs. What becomes of the basic industry, silk?

The answer is that we need to recognize that technical changes will produce loss of work, temporarily, it is to be assumed. The fear is that the displacement of workers may become permanent. That would produce social conditions in this country which may not only alter our economy but alter our form of government.

Thus far, all these problems have been handled piece-meal. There has been no over-all policy, no concept of the relationship of change to the social problems of this country. This much one can say with certainty: the American people will never again permit the social conditions produced by 10,000,000 unemployed men and women. It does not matter whether the President is a Republican or a Democrat; the protest against unemployment will transcend politics. This is the most serious problem that faces our people.

"More Monstrous Monster" Theory Adopted

LONDON

In British eyes, the grand, unseen drama of the last fortnight has been President Kennedy's careful choice, after prolonged study, between two competing systems of Soviet demonology.

The rejected system, still popular in Paris and Bonn, is based on the theory of the Kremlin's imperviousness. According to this theory, you may be sweeter than sugar to the Soviets, and they will still cut your gizzard out if they see a good chance. And you may also be publicly brutal to the Soviets, and they will still answer politely if they fear your strength—as they answered Adolf Hitler politely until he actually invaded Russia.

According to this theory, in sum, the approach to the Kremlin hardly matters. The only thing that really matters is the Kremlin's hard-eyed estimate of the balance of power. If the President had adopted this theory after his long White House meetings with his Soviet experts, it follows that he would have concentrated almost exclusively on the defense effort.

Instead, the President very tentatively adopted the competing demonological theory, which commands rather solid support in the British Foreign Office. This may be called the theory of the more monstrous monster.

According to this theory, the Kremlin is far from impervious to other influences, even although primarily influenced by its balance of power estimate. The wrong Western approach may make the Soviet monster very much more monstrous. The right approach may even make the monster a little less monstrous. Hence the choice of approach to the Kremlin becomes very important indeed.

At least in the past year or two, the strongest arguments in favor of the theory of the more monstrous monster have been provided by the British and American Embassies in Moscow. The British Embassy, particularly, has stated the case in its most extreme form.

The British Ambassador to Moscow, Sir Frank Roberts, and his staff are in fact convinced that Nikita S. Khrushchev, despite all his admitted faults, probably represents a last best chance of some sort. They have been warning that if the West rebuffs Khrushchev, if the West coldly rejects the opportunity to negotiate forthrightly with Khrushchev, then the present Khrushchev will be replaced by some thing vastly more unpleasant.

This replacement may take the form of a new Khrushchev, enraging by Western rebuffs and vowed to vengeance. Or it may take the form of a new super-monster, who will climb to power in the Kremlin because Western rebuffs have exposed the bankruptcy of Khrushchev's allegedly moderate foreign policy.

The American Embassy has apparently been putting the case somewhat less strongly than the British Embassy. The possibility of a dramatic power struggle within the Kremlin has not been emphasized. Instead, U. S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson has emphasized the possibility that the "war-is-not-inevitable" line of the Twentieth Party Congress may be radically altered at the MYTHICAL CAT—You're going to hear a lot about "Tom Kitten" during the years of the Kennedy administration. "Tom" is the mythical pet of President Kennedy's daughter Caroline, as invented by the Republican National Committee and published in the GOP "Battle Line."

Tom can type, but apparently can't strike the upper case key on his machine, hence all of his writings appear in lower case, reminiscent of Don Marquis' cockroach "Archie." But be that as it may, Tom, or his creator, has a lot of humor.

"When I first entered the white house," Tom wrote, "I had a terrible fright, there were a lot of muzzles hanging on the wall and I thought the place was full of big dogs. It turned out, however, that there weren't any dogs—the muzzles were the ones Mr. Salinger puts on the congressional leaders and vice president Johnson when they leave the Tuesday meetings with the president.

"A harrowing moment for me came when I was waiting outside the president's office while he was composing a speech in his own handwriting on a yellow pad of paper. I was dozing and almost got squashed when the conference of 35 people broke up and they poured out the door without warning.

"Living in the white house really is like camping out in union station on a holiday weekend. The only difference is that everyone in the mob is named Kennedy."

"I am considering a protest because I was led to believe there would be plenty of companions, on the way down somebody told me that a lot of cats from hollywood had the run of the place, but I can't find them."

Despite the political needle, sometimes all too obvious, Tom's tales are amusing to read. That cat has a future.

Vodka, Friendly Westerners Trip Soviet Likeness Of Ugly American

By Jack Anderson

(Editor's Note — While Drew Pearson is news-gathering in South America his column is written by his associate, Jack Anderson.)

WASHINGTON — This is the story of an ugly Russian. For our purposes, let's call him Vladimir, because it's as likely as any name to mislead the Soviet Secret Police.

Vladimir's story is not only true, it is typical. Only a few details have been changed for his protection. The purpose of the tale is to suggest that the ugly American, now held in such widespread opprobrium, has his Russian counterpart.

Vladimir was a squat, solid man, slightly grotesque, with a huge head and heavy eyebrows like displaced mustaches. In his small, blue eyes was a world of shrewdness. He had an instinct for self-preservation and a remarkable knowledge of the pitfalls that could trip up a lowly people's clerk.

Assigned to a Soviet Embassy in Western Europe, he devoted himself to learning who should be given a wide berth. He quickly sensed, for instance, that the embassy doorman was treated with far more deference than his glittering uniform demanded. Vladimir correctly concluded the man was a KGB agent, strategically located to watch the comings and goings.

Vladimir always greeted the doorman with elaborate politeness. For he had no desire to get in wrong with the dreaded KGB whose agents possessed the terrible power to stamp "anti-party" on a man's record.

There was one contradiction in Vladimir's cautious nature: excess patriotism toward the Russian national drink. He consumed too much vodka, a failing which eventually got him into trouble.

Vladimir and his wife Natasha, before they were admitted through the Iron Curtain to work in the West, were carefully indoctrinated. They were warned to consider the capitalist world as enemy territory. They must expect to be surrounded by spies and provocateurs seeking to lure them away from the Communist cause.

Upon their departure they were outfitted in clothes superior in style and quality to anything they could purchase in Moscow. Instructions went with the new wardrobe. It was important for Soviet prestige that they be as well dressed as westerners. The new clothes were to be worn whenever they appeared in public.

Fancy Coal Heavers

This order once produced a perplexing problem. A supply of coal was delivered to the private apartment house which the embassy had leased for the families of low-ranking employees. It had to be stored in the basement, but embassy rules wouldn't permit the admission of westerners into the building.

Since the coal-delivery men were clearly westerners, the Russian ordered the coal dumped in the yard, then shoveled it into the basement themselves. This was obviously a job requiring old clothes. But they would be in view of passing westerners, and Moscow had directed them always to dress well in public.

The dilemma was taken up in anxious conference, and a solemn decision was reached that it would be better to risk ruining good clothes than to incur Moscow's displeasure. So they attacked the coal pile, all dolled up in their best.

The wives seldom appeared in public except for brief forays into the stores. Then they were usually careful to go in pairs. Although the ladies were invited to diplomatic affairs, they rarely showed up. Despite their new clothes, they never appeared quite as chic as the western women. Since a good showing was important for Soviet prestige, the best solution was to leave the wives at home.

Vladimir, whose lowly clerk's job did not entitle him to join in the diplomatic-social swim, was once permitted to attend one Trade Ministry reception—unfortunately for him as it turned out. As usual the Russians trooped in together, greeted their host ceremoniously, then retreated en bloc to a strategic corner. Vladimir was ill at ease in such bourgeois surroundings. He stood stiffly with the rest, polite but aloof, dreading the approach of overfriendly westerners.

"He Is Ours"

Once a comrade nudged him and whispered "nash" at the approach of a westerner, meaning "he is ours"—a western Communist. Vladimir's uneasiness gave way to a surge of superiority and contempt for a man who was selling out his country even for Communism. With this westerner, he could be almost brutally rude if he wished.

The trouble began when the Embassy's first secretary, whose position entitled him to display more coexistence than the others, started exchanging toasts with an American businessman. What started out as formal pleasantries soon became a grim drinking game.

The Russian clearly was determined to put the American under the table. He was going to prove that a Communist could outdrink a capitalist, thereby demonstrating Russia's superiority over America. This seemed quite logical to Vladimir who with the other Russians eagerly crowded around to watch the sport.

But before the match could be decided, an American diplomat intervened by escorting his fellow countryman off to the food tables.

The episode later inspired Vladimir under the mellowing influence of vodka to challenge a minor Scandinavian trade official to a drinking duel. But either Vladimir had too much of a start, or the Scandinavian had a head of cast iron. For the affair ended in a Soviet disgrace. Vladimir finally staggered from the reception, tripped over his own feet and fell helplessly into the ample lap of a western dowager.

Next morning, with panic adding to a raging hangover, Vladimir appeared mournfully before his superiors. Not unexpectedly, he was ordered back to Moscow.

As Vladimir and Natasha waited for the plane to fly them home, fear must have settled like a lump of ice in their stomachs. They must have thought wildly about grabbing a policeman's arm and pleading for sanctuary. But they were accompanied by a grim-faced escort who came to bid them a firm goodbye.

With a last despairing look around the waiting room, the ugly Russian and his wife trudged wearily toward the plane.

Return Of The Editor

By John Crosby

One of the little noted and deeply significant facts of the last fifteen years is the growing influence and circulation of the small quality magazines — "The Saturday Review," "Harper's," "The Atlantic Monthly," "The Scientific American" (which is the new whiz kid of the whole group), and, of course, "The New Yorker" (which has always been rich).

As the little magazines grow stronger and richer, the plight of the mass magazines — also a little known fact and even today only a dimly understood one even in their own hierarchy — grows steadily more serious.

"Collier's" and "The Woman's Home Companion," two of the great mass magazines, which were always on our livingroom table when I was growing up, have been in their graves, for these last five years. Some other mass magazines are said to be in trouble. "The New Yorker," on the other hand, with a tidy little circulation of 428,300 approximately, had a whopping net profit, the biggest of any magazine.

In its current issue, "The Saturday Review's" editor, Norman Cousins, explains to his readers that it has just completed merger (or pooling-of-interest, as he calls it) with "McCalls" and this editorial contains some interesting—interesting, hell, astounding—figures: "When E. DeGolyer acquired ownership of 'Saturday Review,' it had a small but noble readership (23,000). Today, SR has a net paid readership of 260,000. We are somewhat startled to see SR's name listed by publishing trade journals among the nation's leading magazines in advertising revenue."

All this is a tremendously encouraging sign of the nation's growing cultural majority, and, conversely, a severe repudiation (in the place it hurts worst, the pocketbook) of those who consider the taste of the country unyieldingly low and trivial. I dropped in on Mr. Cousins to ask what this all portended.

"There's been a revolution in the last fifteen years," said Mr. Cousins. "Fifteen years ago a fairly small group of people had to claw its way to the marketplace of taste. That has changed in two ways. First, it's no longer a small group. Second, you don't have to fight your way in any more. Taste is no longer the sanctuary of the few. It's now possible to be literate without apology."

Most of the mass magazines have been saddled and, I think, crippled by research and survey. (You send a team out to ask the public what it wants or what it will stand for, being particularly sensitive about what it won't stand for, and then tailor your content to what the public says it wants or doesn't want.) Not "The Saturday Review."

"The job of an editor — or at least this particular editor," said Mr. Cousins simply, "is to have a pretty clear idea what he wants to do. Then if he falls flat on his face, you've got the wrong fellow. We don't have time to make surveys. Sure we make mistakes. If an editor continually makes serious mistakes, he ought to get out of the business. But the readers look to us for leadership; that's why they come to us. We have a profound respect for our readers but we don't expect them to tell us how to edit a magazine. I don't say we give the readers things they don't want. We try to anticipate their needs and wants." (But that's a lot different from asking the readers what they want, say I. It's been my experience that readers don't know what they want until they get it, then they recognize it instantly.) Cousins agrees: "A man knows less about his reading habits than he does his sex habits."

"I think the job of an editor is to put his head in a noose once a week," said Cousins grinning. "I've made some dillies. I wrote an editorial once that science was approaching the end of the line — there was nothing left to discover. If I'd been the owner, I'd have fired me. But an editor has got to take a chance."

The return of the editor—strong, opinionated, and a leader rather than a follower — to the magazine world is an event calling for the sounding of trumpets and the clash of cymbals. As Teddy White observed in "View from the Fortieth Floor," which was the thinly disguised story of the death of "Collier's" and "Woman's Home Companion," great publishing ventures are built by great editors.

And wrecked by great editors. (Copyright 1961 New York Herald Tribune Inc.)

Wringer Is Considered Dangerous Weapon

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Modern washing machines and dryers may go a long way toward eliminating one of our commonest accidents—the wringer injury. It has been estimated that this booby trap catches 100,000 hands annually. Many of the victims are children and the mishap is more prevalent today in the lower income group who cannot afford automatic washers.

There are two factors that make this a mutilating accident. The rollers compress and crush the tissues, especially of the small hand and arm of the child. In addition, the victim tends to panic and tugs on the arm in an attempt to free himself. The skin may come loose, or the moving rollers may cause a burn.

The wringer ought to be considered a dangerous weapon and mothers should keep small children away from the device. When anyone is caught, remain calm, turn off the machinery immediately, and release the rollers. Never pull the arm out forcibly while the machine is going and don't reverse the rollers to remove the arm.

Most of these accidents are serious enough to require hospitalization. The skin that is torn away must be put back into place and sutured down like a skin graft. Broken bones must be set and, in some instances, torn tendons and nerves stitched together.

These are the reasons why the wringer injury is regarded as one of the most serious of all home calamities.

MOUTH SORES

M. P. writes: I have been suffering from canker sores in the mouth. I cut out citrus fruits, chocolate, and seafood but still get the sores. Does anyone know the cause of cankers?

REPLY

These oral infections can be stubborn and since you have eliminated the most common offenders, we may assume that foods are not responsible in your case. Some physicians recommend repeated smallpox vaccination for recurring cankers, on the theory that the causative viruses are related. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on canker sores.

RINGWORM AND HAIR LOSS

R. H.: Could ringworm in youth cause baldness in adulthood? If so, how could this be avoided?

REPLY

Yes, but the hair usually regrows as soon as the ringworm is eliminated from the scalp. Good treatment of the fungal infection is the best preventive of baldness from this cause.

Richard Nixon won an army of new friends by his wonderful display of good sportsmanship after losing out to President Kennedy by a whisker. Adlai Stevenson also proved a good loser in his fruitless efforts to beat President Eisenhower. In December 1952, he attended a Gridiron Dinner in Washington and brought down the house by beginning his speech wryly, "A funny thing happened to me on the way to the White House . . ."

Myron Cohen tells about a chronic borrower who begged an old friend to lend him a hundred dollars. "I'll pay it back the minute I return from Chicago," he promised. "Exactly what day will you return?" probed the wary friend. Shrugged the borrower, "Who's going?"

Informed that the prominent singer she liked least in the world had been booked to give her all on the Telephone TV hour, Doris Kanter sniffed cattily, "I'll bet she sings two wrong numbers."

Commission Favors Night Racing For Thoroughbreds

Tawes Takes No Stand On Night Sport

Baltimore Raceway Hopes To Introduce Nocturnal Programs

By GEORGE BOWEN

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—A majority of the Maryland Racing Commission favored Monday the introduction of night racing for thoroughbreds.

A bill is expected to be introduced in the legislature soon to authorize the Baltimore Raceway, now a harness horse track, to be the first in Maryland to race thoroughbreds under lights.

The four harness tracks in the state now race 24 nights each. Baltimore Raceway last year bought control of Bel Air, one of five minor thoroughbred tracks with 12 days each.

Three of the five racing commissions met with Gov. Tawes Monday afternoon to discuss another bill that, among other things, will authorize an increase in the number of days for three mile tracks from 40 to 60 each. During their conversation, they told the governor they felt night thoroughbred racing was worthy of a trial. The commissioners, Chairman Bruce L. L. Jackson and Taylor Chewning, said they would consider 26 nights of it at Baltimore Raceway.

This would mean closing the Bel Air track and transferring its 12 days.

Tawes Undecided

Gov. Tawes said he has taken no stand on the night thoroughbred racing question.

He said the other racing bill prepared as the result of a commission study last summer also will come in without the formal backing of his administration.

Sen. George W. Della, D-Balto, had the bill ready for introduction Monday night.

But a few changes will be made at the request of the three racing commissions. This will take a couple of days.

One of the changes to be made will be how an existing mile track, or an outsider, may acquire with commission approval the days of an existing track up for sale.

The original draft of the bill proposed that Pimlico, Laurel and Bowie would have to share in any purchase and allotment of the days and could not buy alone.

While the bill would authorize each of them to have 20 more days, they would have to come through closing of other tracks since the total number of racing days or nights in Maryland would remain at the present 276.

Four Bills On Sport

The two pending bills will make four on the sport at this session of the legislature.

The two already in would set up a separate three-member commission to regulate harness racing only and to discontinue horse racing in December, January and February.

Hyndman Beats Everett, 64-52, Tying Up Race

To Battle Northern Bedford For Title

Coach John Keller's Hyndman High School Hornets defeated Everett-Southern High School last night at Hyndman by the score of 64-52 and tied Northern Bedford High School of Hopewell in the Bedford County Class C championship race.

Hyndman will meet Northern Bedford in a playoff game for the title Tuesday, March 7, at Everett, and the winner will play Southern Fulton of Warrentonburg, Friday, March 9, at Everett for the Section 5 Class C championship. Northern Bedford holds two decisions over Hyndman.

Everett led at 18-17 in last night's game but the Hornets moved out in front at 25-24 on Jim Arnold's goal and never were headed.

Vohn Lehman and Jim Arnold with 24 and 18 points paced Hyndman offensive while John Kendall contributed 13 points. Ken Pittman and Harry Felton led Everett with 17 and 13 tallies.

The win gave Hyndman a record of 3-7 for the season in the Bedford County League and an overall mark of 8-11.

Hyndman hosts Oldtown High School Wednesday and meets LaSalle of Cumberland at Hyndman Friday night. Box score:

Fort Hill High School's Sentinels shook a 7-year jinx by winning its first game at Valley High School last night by the score of 59-52 and closed its W.M.I. League campaign by tying Bruce High School for third place.

The Sentinels had lost seven consecutive games on the Valley court before last night's victory. The Black Knights have won five of the eight games played at Fort Hill since the series began in 1954.

Last night's win gave Coach Jim Eckard's quint a 6-4 league record. The Sentinels finished two games off the pace set by Allegany, winner of the title with an 8-2 record. Beall copped runner-up honors with seven wins and three defeats.

The teams battled on even terms in the first quarter which ended 17-all as the result of a field and foul goal by Jerry Winner. The Sentinels broke a 23-23 tie early in the second period and never relinquished the lead there.

Moore Will Fight

STOCKHOLM (UPI)—An agreement between the managers of world light-heavyweight champion Archie Moore and Swedish hardhitter Lennart Risberg for a title match in Sweden next fall will be signed in Miami on March 14, it was announced Monday.

Jack (Doc) Kearns, manager of Archie Moore, told a news conference Monday that the fighters have agreed in principle for a title match in Stockholm or Goteborg next August or latest next September 15th.

The agreement stipulates a return bout within 90 days in case Risberg should win, also, if either of the two boxers loses a match before the title match, it will be called off.

Fornieles Reports To Boston Sox

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI)—Ace relief pitcher Mike Fornieles checked into the Boston Red Sox camp Monday from his home in Cuba.

Fornieles' appearance was welcomed by manager Mike Higgins, well aware of the contribution the right hander made to the Red Sox last season when he established a new American League relief record with 70 appearances.

Niagara Given Berth In NIT

NEW YORK (AP)—Niagara, which upset second-ranked St. Bonaventure, was selected Monday as the ninth team in the National Invitation Basketball Tournament.

Three more teams must be picked for the 12-team field which opens play at Madison Square Garden March 16.

Niagara has a 15-4 record for the season and has won eight of its last nine games. The team beat St. Bonaventure Saturday night at Olean, N.Y., 87-77.

Buckeyes Top Cage Poll Twelfth Straight Week

Bonnies Beat Out Bearcats For 2nd

By The Associated Press

Mighty Ohio State is the unanimous choice as the No. 1 college basketball team in the nation for the 12th straight week, and St. Bonaventure is clinging to the runner-up spot by a slender thread.

The weekly Associated Press poll Monday showed the unbeaten, high-flying Buckeyes still unchallenged. They received all 36 of the first place votes cast by the special panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

On the basis of 10 for a first place vote, 9 for second, etc., St. Bonaventure fell farther back of the lead and just managed to beat out Cincinnati for the No. 2 position.

Bonnies Defeated

The Bonnies dropped their second decision of the season Saturday night to Niagara 87-77 after scoring their 22nd victory earlier in the week over Siena.

This caused distribution of the second place votes, which a week ago went solidly to St. Bonaventure, and tightened the race for the season's runner-up honors. With only two more regular season games to play, Ohio State looks like a cinch for the poll title.

The Buckeyes, who whipped Indiana 73-69 and Wisconsin 97-74 to extend their season's string to 22, lead the poll with 360 points. St. Bonaventure has 291 with Cincinnati, winner over Houston and North Texas, in close pursuit with 286.

Completing the top ten are Bradley, No. 4; North Carolina, No. 5; Iowa, No. 6; Kansas State, No. 7; West Virginia, No. 8; Duke, No. 9, and Southern California, No. 10.

It's exactly the same list of teams as a week ago, with a slight reshuffling of the order.

Bradley Is Fourth

Bradley, winner over Wichita and Tulsa, stayed at the No. 4 spot by North Carolina, which downed Duke 69-66 in overtime, climbed from seventh to fifth. Duke dropped from sixth. Iowa also fell a rung although it whipped both Michigan and Minnesota.

Kansas State, winner over Kansas and Missouri, and West Virginia, which scored over Penn

Millsaps Gets Rams' Mentor

Smith Is Named Football Coach

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Millsaps College hired former professional football player Flavius J. Smith as head football coach Monday.

Smith, who played for the Pittsburgh Steelers and Los Angeles Rams, has been assistant coach at Shepherd College in Shepherdstown, W. Va.

Smith served as head basketball coach at Shepherd College this year after succeeding Billy O. Wireman. His Shepherd Rams won eight and lost eleven.

Highlanders Test Campers In Class A Contest At Bruce

Beall High School's engagement here with LaSalle's Explorers for the Potomac Valley Conference championship and a District One Class A semi-final featuring Allegany's Campers and Southern's Highlanders on the Bruce High court in Westernport tonight highlights the basketball program in the tri-state area.

Both Beall and LaSalle will be shooting for their first P.V.C. basketball crown when they clash on S.S. Peter and Paul court at 8 o'clock.

Beall Sets Pace

Coach "Ebbie" Finzel's Mountaineers now lead the race with an 8-1 record while LaSalle occupies the runner-up spot with seven wins and one loss. Tonight's winner will be the league's 1960-61 champion. This is Beall's third season in the league. LaSalle made its debut this year.

Beall with an overall record of 16-4 finished in second place in the W.M.I. League with a 7-3 record, one game back of Allegany's champions (8-2) and won the opening game of the series from LaSalle at Frostburg, 73-71, on February 1. Since dropping a 73-71 decision to Fort Hill here, the Mountaineers have won four in a row from Valley, Mt. Savage, Keyser and Bruce, all by comfortable margins.

LaSalle, undefeated in 11 games at home this season, owns a 20-3 record and since losing at Beall the Explorers have reeled off seven wins in a row at the expense of Bedford, Ridgeley, Bayard, Fort Ashby, Northern, Fort Hill and Allegany.

Joe Wagner and "Chick" Snider will officiate.

Victor Plays Aberdeen

Coach Chet Payne's Campers and Coach Carl Schoonover's Oakland quip meet tonight at Bruce in a game that will qualify the winner for the District Class A championship game Saturday at 7:30 p. m., on the South Hagerstown High School court. Aberdeen High School of Harford county will be the opponent of the team winning tonight's game.

Allegany knocked Southern out of the running in last year's district finale here, 78-49, after the Garrett Countians had kayced Frederick, 75-53 and Howard County High, of Ellicott City, 77-66. The win advanced the Campers to the state semi-finals at College Park where they were drubbed by Bladensburg, 83-59.

Southern will be making its eighth appearance in a district tournament. The Highlanders have been in four Class A meets and three Class B events but never have qualified for the state tournament. In Class A, Oakland teams were ushered out by Hagerstown, 64-43, in 1953, in 1954 by Allegany, 73-47, in 1959 by North Hagerstown, 78-58, and last year by Allegany. Southern has figured in 12 district tournament contests, winning five and losing seven.

Won 6 Out Of 14

Since the schools were classified in 1947, Allegany teams have won six district titles — 1960, 1956, 1954, 1953, 1950 and 1947. Fort Hill has emerged the winner three times, old Hagerstown High thrice and Frederick and North Hagerstown once each over the 14-year span. Both Hagerstown schools and Frederick are now competing in Class AA.

The Campers will be playing their twenty-second game of the season tonight. Their record to date is 14-7. Southern has won 10 and lost eight.

Officials for the game at Westernport will be Pete Elliott and Joe Wolfe.

Don Moran scored 17 of his 23 points in the first half to lead the Old Germans to a 71-48 rout of Wilson Hardware Company's quint last night in the City Basketball League feature battle at Fort Hill High School.

The win gave the Old Gees sole possession of first place in the second half championship race with a 4-0 record and extended the victory string of the unbeaten first half champs to 13 games.

Phil Smith broke a 5-5 tie early in the game as the Old Germans took a 15-7 lead at the quarter and stayed on top throughout.

Gary Keedy tossed in 17 points for the winners while Phil Smith and Dave Marple garnered 11 each. Gene Kerns and Bob Lacko headed Wilson's scoring with 14 and 12 tallies.

Bob Wilson sank two foul shots after he was fouled at the buzzer to give Boal's Funeral Home quint a 52-50 decision over Roseland. Mann had tied the score at 50-all with 1:11 left to play.

Bill Wright of Boal's and Jack Patterson of Roseland topped the scorers with 17 points each.

The Forty & Eight Club trimmed the Knights of Columbus in the other game on the program by the score of 69-51.

Ronnie Cage's goal put the 40 & 8 ahead to stay at 11-10. Cage dumped in 12 points in the third period and finished up with a total of 17. Dick Pitko collected 19 and Ellis Lambert obtained 17. Jim Thompson sparked the Caseys with 10 goals and 22 markers. Box scores:

Clem McCarthy, Once Voice Of Racing, Is Broke, Ailing

Invalid Is Living In Nursing Home In Midtown Manhattan

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—"The horses are at the post."

"They're off!"

"Rounding the first turn..."

Millions of Americans must still remember the crisp, clipped voice of Clem McCarthy, who for more than a quarter of a century dramatized and brought to life the big horse races for radio and television fans.

Today the once vibrant voice of the famed caller is a hoarse whisper. McCarthy is 78 years old—ill, broken and financially busted. A semi-invalid, he is living largely on memories — forgotten by fair weather friends — in a nursing home in midtown Manhattan.

One longtime associate, Harry Dube, helped pay the bills for a while. Then he had to look elsewhere for assistance. He wrote a letter to 54 race tracks. One took the trouble to reply, and promised to look into it.

Fund Is Set Up

Radios and newspapers joined in the appeal. Finally, a Clem McCarthy fund was set up at 10 Rockefeller Plaza, New York.

McCarthy, son of an Irish horse dealer and auctioneer, grew up in the track tradition. He broadcast his first Kentucky Derby in 1928—as a fill-in on a special beam to the Chicago area. He was an immediate success.

In the years that followed Clem became a fixture around the big tracks. He hobnobbed with owners, trainers and jockeys. His staccato style became well-known in almost every household.

He lived high. He married an actress, Vina Smith, and became a friend of the sports giants of the golden era—Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, John McGraw. The world was his oyster.

Crippled For Life

Then in 1949 his wife fell ill. Medical bills mounted. She died a year later. In 1957 McCarthy was in a tragic automobile accident and suffered injuries which left him a cripple for life. His money gradually disappeared, but nothing could take his razor-sharp recollections of the "good old days."

"I've said Man O'War was the best horse I've ever seen, but I think Citation would give Big Red a whale of a race over a mile and a half," the announcer reminisced Monday as he sat in a wheelchair in his room.

Quit Betting In 1936

McCarthy says he quit betting on races in 1936.

"There was a saying that all horse players died broke," he said. "I paraphrased that to read: 'All horse players live broke.' I believed it—and still do."

Hialeah Park Daily Double Payoff $1,019

Winners Sign Forms Of Revenue Bureau

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP)—Michelly, a 96-1 shot, won the second race at Hialeah today to complete a $1,019.20 daily double with Vince, winner of the first race. It was the first plus-$800 double of the meeting, thus coming under the Internal Revenue Bureau directive requiring holders of winning tickets to identify themselves before being paid off.

Three $10 tickets were sold on the winning combination: six $5 tickets and 113 $2 tickets.

When a plus-$800 double hit at Tropical Park this winter, the track management did not require identification of the winners. Hialeah's management, however, instructed their cashiers to demand identity before paying off.

Michelly, ridden by Charlie Burr, outdistanced Land Grant by a nose after a head and head battle from the eighth pole. Outrigger, the 3-to-5 favorite, hung in the drive and finished third, 2 1/4 lengths behind Land Grant. Michelly ran 1 1/4 miles in 1:33 2/5 and paid $194.80, $77.50 and $15.10 across the board. It was the biggest win mutual of the meeting which ends Friday.

Vince, well-ridden by John Sellers, held off fast closing Kintaro to win the first race by a head. Cosmic took finished third. Vince ran 1 1/4 miles in 2:08 and paid $19.90.

By late afternoon 90 of the 122 tickets had been cashed and none of the winners had protested when asked to sign the identification forms.

Mutuels manager Riggs Mahoney announced that two of the three $10 tickets had been cashed; all six of the $5 tickets, and 82 of the 113 $2 tickets.

Crozier's Rider Given Suspension

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP)—Jockey Chris Rogers was suspended for 10 days by Hialeah's stewards today for permitting Crozier to drift out in the final 70 yards of last Saturday's Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah.

Crozier, in drifting out, brushed against Carry Back, but the latter won the race by a head. Had Crozier won the race, he would have been disqualified.

In the Everglades Stakes, 10 days before the Flamingo, Crozier finished third to Carry Back and was disqualified for bearing in on the stretch turn and then bearing out through the drive. Manuel Ycaza, who rode the Fred W. Hooper colt in that race, also was suspended.

Rogers' suspension begins March 1 and ends March 11.

Out of 12 Red Sox club records, for batters, Ted Williams holds only two. Jimmy Fox holds three and Tris Speaker two.

Cards of Thanks

We wish to thank all our friends and neighbors and relations for the kindness shown us in our bereavement following the death of our beloved husband and father. We also wish to extend our thanks to the Rev. Chester C. Husted, the pallbearers, those who sent floral tributes and those who donated the use of their cars for the funeral.

Mrs. Flora Dolan and Daughter

We the family of the late and beloved Theda F. Dawson wishes to extend thanks and appreciation to relatives, friends and neighbors for their heartfelt sympathy and consideration shown in their hour of loss. Also, we wish to extend our thanks and gratitude to the staff of Sacred Heart Hospital for all their kind services.

THE FAMILY

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Clymer K. Alderton who died Feb. 28th, 1959.
Flowers we place upon your grave,
Will wither and decay;
But love for the one who sleeps
beneath,
Will never fade away.
Sadly missed by Wife and Daughters

South might have arranged to describe his holding more economically by treating his major suits as equals, and bidding

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF ALLEGANY COUNTY, MARYLAND
INVITATION FOR BIDS FOR THE RE-PAIRING AND RE-PAVING OF THE WOMEN'S SIDE OF SYLVAN RETREAT (INSANE ASYLUM), FURNACE STREET EXTENDED, CUMBERLAND, ALLEGANY COUNTY, MARYLAND.

Sealed bids will be received by the County Commissioners of Allegany County, Maryland, until the 10th day of March, 1961, at 10:30 A. M., E. S. T., by the Clerk, the undersigned, whose address is the Court House, Cumberland, Maryland, for work to be done and materials to be used in the re-paving and re-lighting of the women's side of Sylvan Retreat, Furnace Street Extended, Cumberland, Maryland, in accordance with certain General Specifications, dated February 17, 1961, prepared under the direction of the County Commissioners of Allegany County, Maryland.

Said Specifications will be available on and after the 17th day of February, 1961, at the office of the undersigned Clerk in the Court House, Cumberland, Maryland, to whom requests for additional information should be made.

Bids must be accompanied by a certified check for $100.00, payable to the County Commissioners of Allegany County, Maryland, or a bid bond in said amount, said bond to be with a bonding company licensed to do business in the State of Maryland, and to be approved by the County Commissioners of Allegany County, Maryland. The certified check of the successful bidder will be returned to the successful bidder upon execution of the contract; other checks will be returned to the unsuccessful bidders on awarding of the contract.

Bids must be submitted in sealed envelopes marked, "BID FOR RE-PAIRING AND RE-PAVING OF THE WOMEN'S SIDE OF SYLVAN RETREAT" on the outside of the envelope.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish a performance bond in the total amount of the contract price, and a labor and material bond in one-half of the amount of the contract price.

The installation period herein shall be guaranteed unconditionally for a period of one (1) year from the date of acceptance against electrical defects arising from faulty materials or workmanship.

Either replacement or repairs shall be made promptly to any defective materials or workmanship without charge during its work period.

Evidence of Workmen's Compensation and Public Liability Insurance must be furnished, and the Contractor must comply with all Federal, State and Local Regulations.

Labor rates must be figured at prevailing hourly wage rates in the vicinity at the date of the contract and the Contractor must be bonded for the provisions of Section 80 (b) (c) of the Code of Public Local Laws of Allegany County (Everett's 1955 Edition).

The County Commissioners of Allegany County hereby reserve the right to reject any or all bids or to accept any.

spades first. Altho the hearts are longer, the spades have better texture and, by showing them first, South will have available a convenient rebid in hearts. In any event, however, the partnership would eventually arrive at four hearts.

West made the safe opening of the ten of diamonds and the declarer overtook dummy's jack with the ace and quickly cashed out three rounds of the suit in order to discard the queen of clubs. It may seem that there was no need for a hasty sluff since South has control of the clubs, but the psychological effect it produced on East was devastating.

The four of hearts was led from the dummy next and East played low. South's seven forced out the ace of trumps, and the defense was subsequently limited to two more tricks — the ace of spades and the king of hearts.

West berated his partner for not rising with the king of hearts when that suit was led in order to return his singleton spade. West would have been able to give him a ruff, with the ace of trumps still to score. East contended that, inasmuch as declarer seemed so anxious to obtain a quick club discard, that suit must be his weak spot, and any side strength in West's hand figured to be in clubs.

While there is a certain logic in East's reasoning, nevertheless, when there is only one holding that will defeat the contract, a defender should play on the theory that partner has that holding no matter how unlikely it may be. If West does prove to have the ace of clubs, then the defense might as well surrender, for declarer can surely restrict his losses in the major suits to two tricks.

In order to defeat the contract, East must find his partner with the ace of hearts. He should therefore have put up the king of trumps in an effort to obtain the lead. When it holds the trick the rest is easy.

PTA To Sponsor Minstrel Show

Stay young-looking by following these dietary rules.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Train Yourself To Eat Wholesome Foods

Long before the "life begins at forty stage," every woman should teach herself to prefer the foods that will help retain the attributes of youth—verve and a radiant appearance. If you get your appetite and taste preferences under control early, you will not only never have a weight problem, but will always be younger in appearance and in heart than in birthdays.

Of course, it is never too late to start eating for beauty and health. Even after years of abuse, many a woman has regained a far more youthful appearance, just by correcting her eating habits.

If you want to feel and look your best, keep these points about your daily diet in mind for the rest of your life:

1. Eat much less of those "fuel" foods, the starches and sugars, than you did before maturity. Because you are less active as an adult than as a child, you need less for energy. Consequently, any average you consume will only add pounds that make you feel lethargic. No asset for the charmer at any age!

2. Consume plenty of high vitamin and mineral foods, fruits, vegetables and milk, for the continuing beauty of your skin and hair.

3. Make sure to get your daily requirement of protein foods, lean meats, cheese and eggs, for renewal of tissues. Ask your doctor whether you are one of the persons who can benefit by following the new, high-protein diets.

Try patterning your daily menus after this sample:

Breakfast: Fresh (or canned) blackberries (high in vitamin C). One egg omelette, 1 thin slice of toasted dark bread, 1 thin pat of butter, coffee (with milk if desired, but no cream or sugar).

Lunch: Hot vegetable plate, melba toast, milk or buttermilk.

Dinner: Lean Swiss steak, steamed onions, 1 small potato, tomato aspic with cottage cheese on greens, fresh (or canned) pineapple, tea or coffee with milk if desired.

YOUR BEAUTY DIET: Want to gain weight? Lose it? Remain the same? Whatever your weight problem, YOUR BEAUTY DIET will show you the answer. Get your copy by sending 10c and a stamped, return envelope to "Secrets of Charm," c/o this newspaper.

Sport Car Races Dates Approved

The Mayor and Council indicated its approval yesterday of application by the Lions Club Foundation to conduct National Championship Sports Car Races at Cumberland Municipal Airport May 12, 13 and 14.

The Lions Club enclosed a copy of a letter it had sent to the Municipal Airport Commission asking to use the airport again.

Council also received a petition signed by 40 residents of the Smith Street area protesting a proposal to ban parking on both sides of the street and asking that one-side parking—as at present—be permitted and the street made one-way from Centre Street to Mechanic Street.

The matter was referred to Police and Fire Commissioner Philmore Fleming who was absent because of illness. However, City Attorney William R. Carscaden said it was his opinion members of council favored the one-way proposal but had not decided on which way.

Traffic counters will be installed from Mechanic to Centre one week and from Centre to Mechanic another week—to help determine which way traffic flow is heaviest.

Trooper Plays Stork Role

A Maryland state trooper delivered the 13th child of a Finzel Road area woman Sunday when the stork wouldn't wait for the ambulance.

The Durst ambulance in Frostburg was dispatched to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lavin, who live one-half mile off the Finzel Road to take the expectant mother to Miners Hospital in Frostburg.

En route there, the ambulance driver signaled to Tfc. Donald R. Wade and the trooper followed him to the Garrett County home.

The road into the house, a half-mile long, was impassable so the ambulance crew and Tfc. Wade walked in.

However, when they arrived, they found the baby was on his way into this world, so Tfc. Wade took over and delivered the six-pound, nine ounce boy.

After taking care of the baby and the mother, Tfc. Wade and the ambulance crew took the infant to the hospital.

The mother, Mrs. Helen Leola Lavin, 41, who still remains at home due to the bad roads, and the baby are reported as "doing fine" today.

Man Sentenced On Contributing Charge

Magistrate Louis Fatkin yesterday in Allegany County Juvenile Court sentenced a local man to one year in the Maryland House of Correction after convicting him of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

The man, Robert Dale Bennett, 23, of 324 Bedford Street, pleaded guilty to the charge. He waived his right to a jury trial.

Donald Mason, assistant state's attorney, and Edwin R. Liya, county investigator, presented the state's case. Bennett was not represented by counsel.

The local man was apprehended last weekend by City Police in connection with a case involving a 13-year-old local girl.

Liya today read a statement given by Bennett relating his part in the case. Mason informed the court that Bennett has eight previous criminal convictions, including a conviction on a similar charge.

He has ten days in which to appeal the decision.

Leak Reported In Force Main

William F. Miller, foreman at the sewage treatment plant, has reported to Street Commissioner John J. Long that a leak has appeared in the force main about 100 feet from Oldtown Road on the northeast side.

Laboratory tests showed the appearance of water above the force main of the Everts Creek Pumping station, he said.

Miller told Long repair will probably call for extensive digging as weather permits and because of its location, repair of the leak must be done by hand.

New Light Installed In Council Chamber

A new light was shed on the Mayor and Council yesterday. Fluorescent.

The new lights installed in the council chamber by the Queen City Electric Company, were used for the first time at a council meeting yesterday and coupled with the new coat of paint on the walls brightened the atmosphere considerably.

Queen City furnished and installed the lights for the low bid of $650.

Another improvement to the council chamber is due. Council accepted the bid of $895.80 of Goodyear Service Stores to three air conditioners to be installed in the chamber.

The Senate passed two bills, only one of which went to Barron. It was a measure to set up in law divisions of maternal, child and dental care in the State Health Department (21-11).

Highlighting committee action Monday was the House Judiciary's recommendation of a bill to set up a Department of Corrections by combining the state's penal institutions and Board of Probation and Parole as recommended by the State Crime and Delinquency Council. The institutions are now controlled by the State Department of Institutions.

The Senate Judiciary Committee recommended passage of a resolution calling for a referendum vote on a Constitutional limitation on the amount of income tax that can be levied against state residents.

Free Tuition

(Continued from Page 14) support to a guarantee that prospective teachers continue receiving free tuition if Frostburg is converted to a branch of the University of Maryland.

He also said that the free tuition for future teachers at all State colleges was recommended by the Warfield Commission last year.

"We're following that pattern," the governor said.

The commission also had recommended that the teacher colleges at Salisbury and Towson be converted into branches of the State university. The plan as a whole had been shelved for this session of the legislature.

In addition to the estimated teacher students who will come under the free tuition plan at the university and Morgan, it is estimated that 3,004 will be enrolled at the five teacher colleges for a total of 5,762.

LaVale Group Faces Action Over Sewage

Health Department Secures Warrants

J. B. Dowling, sanitarian supervisor for the Allegany County Health Department, yesterday obtained warrants for five LaVale property owners after they failed to correct a sewage problem along U. S. Route 40 in LaVale.

Mr. Dowling obtained the warrants from Magistrate Paul W. Barnett after the five property owners failed to comply in the time limit specified by the Health Department.

Facing the charges are Ray C. Lakin, 1057 National Highway, LaVale; Mrs. Anita Denkinberger, 111 North Allegany Street; V. H. Ruppenthal, 1059 National Highway, LaVale; Ernest Heberle, 1055 National Highway, LaVale; and Thomas A. Ricker, National Highway, LaVale.

All five will be given hearings Friday afternoon in Trial Magistrate Court.

On February 6, Mr. Dowling acting on orders by Dr. Ton van Strien, Allegany County Health officer, sent letters to the five property owners giving them five days to correct the sewage problem.

In the letters Mr. Dowling stated that a stopped sewer line to which the five properties were attached was causing sewage to back into a drainage ditch along Route 4.

The five property owners were charged specifically with creating a condition dangerous to health and after due notice failed to abate the health hazard in violation of Article 43, Section 50 of the Maryland Code.

Food Service Schools To Be Held In County

A series of food service schools will be held in three Allegany County communities during the week of April 16.

The classes, primarily for managers of food establishments, will be sponsored by the Allegany County Health Department and the Division of Food Control of the State Health Department.

The tentative schedule calls for several classes to be held in Cumberland, one in Frostburg and one in Westernport.

In previous years, such training courses were held at the Health Department quarters here. This year's schedule "will take the classes to the people," according to John R. Meadows, supervising sanitarian for the state unit.

Officials said that while the courses are intended primarily for management, employers will be invited to bring any workers they wish.

The tentative program for the briefing sessions will be refrigeration, dry storage, food service techniques, premises and facilities of the State Health Department laboratory here.

Plans for the school were made here recently when Mr. Meadows conferred with Dr. Ton van Strien, county health officer, and William F. Williams and Gaylord Brooks, sanitarians.

Conference Set March 7 On Sewage

Policies, Planning Will Be Discussed

Sewage problems throughout Allegany County will be discussed at a meeting March 7 at 1:30 p. m. in the Union Street County Building.

The meeting was arranged at the joint request of the Board of Allegany County Commissioners and Dr. Ton van Strien, county health officer, and Robert M. Barnett, chief of the Department of Environmental Hygiene of the State Health Department.

The purpose of the meeting, according to J. B. Dowling, sanitarian supervisor, is to discuss sewage policies of the State of Maryland and the State Board of Health in Allegany County and certain phases of planning on sewage with the Allegany County Sanitary Commission and the County Commissioners.

The County Commissioners, Sanitary Commission will attend, along with officials from several municipalities where hazardous sewage problems exist and developments are being held up are being invited to attend.

Officials of the City of Cumberland are being asked to sit in on the meeting.

Mr. Dowling said some officials have estimated up to $6,000,000 of construction work throughout the county is being held up until sewage problems can be solved.

14 B&O Cars Derail Near Somerset

SOMERSET, Pa. (UPI) —Fourteen cars of an 89-car Baltimore & Ohio freight train left the tracks Monday night at nearby Listie. No one was injured.

Seven of the cars loaded with iron ore tore through a small railroad bridge and plunged into Wills Creek. B & O officials said the accident may have been caused by a broken rail.

Chief dispatcher H. S. Metz, Pittsburgh, said the train was en route from Rockwood to Johnstown.

The cars which left the rails were located at the rear of the train. They tore up more than 500 feet of track.

Metz said work crews were summoned to the scene. It was not immediately determined when service would be restored.

Injured Youth Still 'Serious'

Carl Huff, 16, of 100 Arch Street, was reported still in "very serious" condition last night at Memorial Hospital, where he was admitted Saturday night following an auto accident on West Virginia Route 28 near Ridgeley.

Two other youths injured in the crash were reported in "satisfactory" condition at the same hospital. They are Kenneth E. Deatelhauser, 16, East First Street, and James C. Angellella, 16, of 27 Henderson Avenue.

Three Bethesda teen-agers were injured in a one-car crash early yesterday morning on U. S. Route 40 near the State Police Barracks in LaVale.

Admitted to Sacred Heart Hospital were Richard J. Hovermale, 16; Carlos J. Talman, 15, and Allan S. Lester, all of Bethesda. They all are reported in "satisfactory" condition.

Tic. Thomas E. Ruppert identified Hovermale as the driver and said the youth apparently fell asleep at the wheel and rammed into a utility pole.

Panel On College Plan To Feature Lions Club Meet

A panel discussion on the topic "Consolidation of Frostburg State Teachers College into the University of Maryland System," will be held at the meeting of the Cumberland Lions Club, Wednesday, at 12:15 p. m., in the Community Room at YMCA.

C. W. Gilchrist and Albert D. Darby will speak for the proposal and Dr. Thomas V. Baucum and Dr. Raymond O. McCullough against. J. Thomas Moore, program chairman will be moderator. A question and answer period will follow. Wives of members are invited to attend this week's meeting.

Five W. Va. Counties Are Free Of Oak Wilt

Tucker County is one of five West Virginia counties which remain free of oak wilt, the 1960 agricultural survey of that state indicates.

Outbreaks of oak wilt disease in the state have increased 32 per cent over the previous high of 7,105 infections in 1959 and are now spread over 90 per cent of West Virginia, Commissioner of Agriculture John T. Johnson announced.

Only, Brooke, Webster, Tucker, Mason and Ohio counties remain free of the wilt, according to F. Waldo Craig, state oak wilt director, who said it was found for the first time last summer in Taylor and Mercer counties.

Chemistry Students Observed

Dr. Fred A. Snively, right, associate professor of chemistry at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa., is in Allegany County conferring with staff members of the Board of Education, chemistry teachers and students of the high schools. Yesterday afternoon he visited Fort Hill and observed chemistry students working on an experiment. Left to right are Roseann Weber, William Dickinson, Kathryn Skitarelic and Dr. Snively. The Western Maryland Branch of the American Chemical Society is the sponsor of his trip to the county. Dr. Snively will remain in this county through Wednesday.

Loan Firm Bill Gets Support From Senate

Amendment Efforts Are Stymied

By HERB THOMPSON

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — The Maryland Senate Monday night approved, without substantial change, the Case Commission bill to regulate Maryland's savings and loan industry.

It adopted a favorable report and amendments by the Banking and Insurance Committee, beat off attempts to delay the bill and set it up for final passage later this week, possibly Wednesday.

The Senate did accept two amendments from the floor — to insure that a savings and loan firm at the federal cooperative housing project in Greenbelt, Md., could continue operating as at present.

But it rejected five other attempts to amend the bill, by 16-8 and 16-7 votes, in a debate that ran for more than two hours and then was temporarily suspended for completion of the Senate's other business before being resumed.

Sen. H. Winship Wheatley, D-Prince Georges, who succeeded in getting his amendment adopted to protect the "unique" operations of Pines Savings and Loan Association at Greenbelt argued that the amendments constituted no more than "a local bill." He had lost two earlier amendments which would have changed the substance of the bill somewhat.

Chairman John-Clarence North of the Senate Banking Committee argued in vain for defeat of Wheatley's "local" amendments. "You're going to tear this legislation asunder with local amendments," North warned of the Twin Pines Amendment.

The administration had said it would resist all amendments to the measure, a drafted by the Case study commission.

But the Senate went along with Wheatley 16-8 after having rejected two of his previous amendments by that margin.

It earlier had turned back efforts of Sen. Raymond Buffington, D-Balto 3rd, to delay consideration of the legislation until Thursday so he could offer amendments and it rejected an amendment by Sen. James A. Pine, D-Balto County, which would have provided for another member from the public on the regulatory board.

The bill calls for a seven-member commission to regulate the savings and loan industry, now free of State control, and six of the members are to come from the industry.

Commission On Aging Decides On Functions

Agreement on its functions has been reached by the Allegany County Commission for the Aging, according to Rev. Robert E. Bavender, chairman.

The recently organized committee has pledged itself to:

Encourage and develop opportunities for full utilization of the contributions the aging can make to the county.

Concern itself both with immediate problems and planning for the future to ease conditions which beset elder citizens.

Familiarize itself with problems of and solutions for the aging of this county while keeping informed on developments elsewhere.

Study and assemble facts relating to the circumstances and needs of the aging and available resources for meeting them.

Serve as a clearing house on services of and for the aging available and needed in the area.

Serve as a liaison body with local, state and other agencies concerned with problems of the aging.

Promote community education and concern for the aging through such activities as speakers' bureaus, community forums and publicity.

Encourage development of maximum services for the aging among all community groups and public and voluntary organizations.

Propose, recommend and support, after study, legislation of budgetary action.

Two Suspects In Burglary Questioned

Authorities are continuing to question two young men who were caught breaking into and ransacking the liquor store of a Lonaconing area man on Sunday.

Wilbur Waddell, who owns the establishment, had been sleeping in his establishment for several nights in hope of capturing culprits who previously attempted to break in.

Waddell on Saturday night watched as the two youths cut a section of a wall large enough to climb through. He reported that he saw them take a small amount of cash and a quantity of whisky and load up their car with it.

As they were about to make a getaway, Waddell said he confronted them with a shotgun. One young man tried to break away, but Waddell said he fired a shot into the air to stop him. He then forced the boys to call the State Police themselves.

State Police Investigator Milton S. Hart and Trooper Bruce Diehl and Deputy Sheriff William Orr made the arrests. They are being held in connection with a series of breaking and enterings in the Lonaconing-Midland area.

During the police investigation two other men have been implicated by the two nabbed early Sunday morning.

They were to be questioned about the series of thefts today in the office of State's Attorney James S. Getty.

Cumberland Offers Much To Tourists, State Unit Reports

Cumberland has much to offer tourists, the State Department of Economic Development says in its current newsletter.

It says the recently published Community Economic Inventory of Cumberland lists, among other things, that Cumberland has 24 motels and four hotels with a total of 798 rooms, 60 churches, a million dollar shopping center under construction and that the modernization of U. S. Route 40 is being expedited. The newsletter says activities include the National Sports Car Races May 12-14 and regional glider competition May 30.

Over 100,000 acres of picturesque state forests, parks and recreation areas are located within 25 miles of the city. Historical attractions include The Narrows, early America's "Gateway to the West."

As a result he lost a tenant and rent income and spent a large amount of money for repairs. The insurance company paid $1,184.62, for building repairs the declaration stated.

Stewart was driving a motor vehicle west on Route 36 in Gilmore on January 23, 1960. Hilda Jacobs was driving a motor vehicle owned by Vincent E. Jacobs and was traveling east on the highway. Mr. Friend was entering the highway from a side road.

When Hilda Jacobs applied brakes to avoid hitting Friend's car she slid across the center of the road and collided with the plaintiff who was injured and hospitalized. He lost wages, incurred hospital, medical and surgical expenses and his car was damaged, the suit said.

Miss Fahey was crossing Cumberland Street at the intersection of Fayette Street about 5:15 p. m. December 1, 1960. The defendant was approaching on Cumberland Street, proceeded north without headlights on the car and hit the plaintiff throwing her to the street.

The declaration indicates the defendant left the scene without stopping to render aid or assistance. She sustained serious, painful and permanent injuries and was hospitalized.

The agreements were made between the utility firm and William D. and Patricia C. Timbrook; Karl A. and Norma V. Douglas; Lester G. and Lucy M. Rembold; Ray and Ruth E. Bodkin; George C. and Pauline L. Miller; Donald P. and M. Elenita Harman; Arthur S. and Dorothy M. Avey; John E. and Bessie P. Keener.

All three major construction categories — non-residential building, residential building, and heavy engineering — contributed to the rise, with particularly sharp increases reported for highways and electric light and power systems.

Contracts for residential buildings in January amounted to $973,803,000, an increase of five per cent over January 1960. Most of the rise, however, was accounted for by sharp gains in contracts for apartment buildings and for hotels, while single-family homes continued below year-earlier levels. The number of dwelling units represented by the January residential contracts totaled 63,072, down five per cent from a year ago.

48 Per Cent Of Residents Registered

Many Of Age Fail To Sign

An interesting survey of last November's election in Allegany County shows that nearly 48 per cent of the 40,413 registered voters went to the polls on November 8.

The 34,227 who voted constituted 84.69 per cent of those registered.

But the figures compiled by County Commissioner John T. Mason go on to show that the number of registered voters was only 48.01 per cent of the 1960 population of 84,169.

That percentage seems to indicate that a good many residents of Allegany County who are of voting age have just not bothered to register so they can vote when elections come around.

District 14 Leads

In only two of the 28 election districts of this county are more than 60 per cent of the population registered. The leader is District 14 in Cumberland with 777 registered out of a population of 1,208. That figures to 64.32 per cent of the population. Next in line is District 13, Mt. Savage, with 1,517 registered in a population of 2,435 or 62.29 per cent.

The lowest percentage of population registered must be tagged on District 16 at North Branch with only 29.88 per cent registered. The 1960 census counted 2,165 residents in that district and only 647 of them are registered to vote.

Six other districts had only between 30 and 40 per cent of their population registered. They included District 31, McCoole, 30.86 per cent registered; District 21, Gross, 31.82 per cent; District 30, Zihlman, 33.37 per cent; District 1, Little Orleans, 35.23 per cent; District 3, Flintstone, 35.31 per cent, and District 20, Corriganville-Ellerslie, 38.16 per cent.

Vale Summit High

Allegany County's leader last November in the percentage of registrants voting was District 17, Vale Summit, with 92.1 per cent. Some 140 of the 152 registrants went to the polls. However, that 152 registrants is only 42.69 per cent of the 356 persons counted in District 17 in the 1960 census.

District 24 at Eckhart was the only other district with a better than 90 per cent vote. The 699 who voted out of 770 registrants constituted 90.77 per cent. But the 770 registrants was only 46.52 per cent of the 1,655 counted in the 1960 census.

The lowest percentage vote on November 8 in Allegany County, according to Mr. Mason's compilations, was District 2-33, which includes Oldtown and Kifer. Only 81.39 per cent or 433 of the 532 registrants voted in November. But the number registered is 51.95 per cent of the 1,024 persons counted in the 1960 census.

Mr. Mason's figures seem to show that the first job to be done before the 1962 primary election is to get a larger percentage of the county's 84,169 inhabitants registered. For they can't vote if they are not registered.

Eight Right Of Way Agreements Filed

Eight right of way agreements between the Potomac Edison Company and residents of the company's Keyser District have been filed in the land records office of Allegany County Circuit Court.

The agreements were made between the utility firm and William D. and Patricia C. Timbrook; Karl A. and Norma V. Douglas; Lester G. and Lucy M. Rembold; Ray and Ruth E. Bodkin; George C. and Pauline L. Miller; Donald P. and M. Elenita Harman; Arthur S. and Dorothy M. Avey; John E. and Bessie P. Keener.

All three major construction categories — non-residential building, residential building, and heavy engineering — contributed to the rise, with particularly sharp increases reported for highways and electric light and power systems.

Contracts for residential buildings in January amounted to $973,803,000, an increase of five per cent over January 1960. Most of the rise, however, was accounted for by sharp gains in contracts for apartment buildings and for hotels, while single-family homes continued below year-earlier levels. The number of dwelling units represented by the January residential contracts totaled 63,072, down five per cent from a year ago.

Walter R. Campbell, district manager of the Social Security Administration, here, will be guest speaker at today's meeting of the Cumberland Rotary Club at 12:15 p. m. in Central YMCA. His topic is "25 Years of Social Security."

Free Tuition For Future Teachers Set

Tawes Backs Plan To Boost Supply

By MARTY SUTPHIN
ANNAPOLIS (AP) — Gov. Tawes announced Monday night he is authorizing the University of Maryland and Morgan State College to grant free tuition to students studying to be teachers.

Tawes told a press conference the move is "a first step" toward ending the "persistent shortage of qualified teachers in Maryland."

The removal of tuition costs for teacher trainees at Maryland, its Maryland State branch at Princess Anne and Morgan would work the same as it now does at the five State Teachers colleges.

Students studying to be teachers in the State Teachers colleges do not pay tuition fees, provided they are enrolled full time in the teacher education program and provided they pledge to teach for at least two years in Maryland public schools.

Tawes said he is authorizing the respective administrative boards of the university and Morgan to remove the tuitions effective next September. He said the estimated cost of the plan for fiscal 1962 would be $439,534 and it would affect an estimated 2,758 students.

Will Budget Funds

Tawes said he will provide for the additional cost in the supplemental budget to be submitted to the legislature later this session.
